GEORGE HERBERT KNIGHT

George Herbert Knight was the son of the Reverend George Knight of Scarborough, England. He was the organ pupil of Dr. Pyne of Manchester Cathedral and a graduate of Victoria University in Manchester, receiving from it the degree of Bachelor of Music. While at the University, he won for three years in succession the prize offered to the student body for the best original musical composition.

He came to Canada and was a member of the faculty of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and a member of the Examining Board of the University of Toronto. In the United States, he was head of the Organ Department of the Peabody University of Music in Baltimore and later Professor of Organ and Composition at Grinnell College in Iowa. He received the degree of Doctor of Music from McGill University in Montreal. For the last ten years of his life, Dr. Knight taught opera at the Curtis Branch of Fenger High School.

Dr. Knight was a gifted composer of church music. The list of his published works is long, including four cantatas and many anthems, canticles, and part songs.

Mrs. George H. Knight

GEORGE HERBERT KNIGHT

To those who knew Dr. G. Herbert Knight any written tribute will seem inadequate and incomplete. The real tribute to his memory lies within the hearts of his friends, his students and his co-workers. For Dr. Knight loved his world and all who occupied it, and his world, in turn loved and respected him as it is the privilege of few men to be loved and revered.

Dr. G. Herbert Knight was a teacher, a scholar, a musician and, most of all, a gentleman. Never in my long association with him did I hear him utter an unkind word about any student. Kindly, witty, sympathetic and understanding he was a friend to all. To those of us who knew him he seems with us still because his memory is one which cannot die.

INDIAN

As Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was inspired to choose for the beautiful story of "Hiawatha," the subject, the American Indian, we, the June Courier Staff of 1940, also select the American Indian for our theme. Mr. Longfellow felt deeply that this was the right and only theme for such a story, for the American Indians were truly the first dwellers on our vast continent. In a time when they were either greatly feared or hated, Mr. Longfellow was somewhat alarmed as to how the people would receive a long poem about the American Indians. We, the staff, at a time when these braves are largely forgotten, or are mere pictures, have the same fear clinging in our hearts. Still after careful reading and research we believe we owe our first people much. They have given us vast wealth, while we in turn have given them little.

Though we may laugh at their witch doctors, the American Indians have contributed enormously to our modern medicine. It has been said that about eighty-six per cent of all our knowledge concerning drugs has been taken from these people. Agriculturists stood in amazement when they learned that sixty per cent of all foods used throughout the world today originated with the American Indian. Through their accurate knowledge of Astronomy, Physics, and Mathematics, we today could surely learn many things which would benefit us greatly. In some of the arts and sciences we have reached on one line a point which the Indians reached along a parallel line, many, many years ago. Joining these two lines we shall undoubtedly advance far in these subjects since unity means progress. Today in Central America are highways and bridges built approximately 8,000 to 10,000 years ago, and many of these are still in existence and in use. So let us not think of the American Indian as futile, but as a symbol signifying greatness.

For all their gracious giving in the times of our forefathers, we have not treated the Indian justly. We have forced them from their lands, taken their crops, shoved them from reservation to reservation as our fancy flamed within us, or as their land proved more fertile and satisfying to our greed. We have cheated, lied to them, have permitted them to live merely for what we might gain from them. Gradually we have changed; we recognize the Indians not as wild men, but as a race of people who have given us many things of vast worth which we would never have had without their kindly generosity.

The American Indians also have a strong and firm faith in devine power; their faiths vary; each tribe has his own interpretation of God; each worships as his ancestors did in the past; and each carries out his tribal customs with utmost ability. From their beautiful hymns and prayers we find poetry which we are beginning to realize will never die because of its depth of feeling and fine expression. Often do their prayers suggest passages from our songs and psalms in the Bible. One of the prayers chosen from the Incas, who worship the Sun God, will serve as an illustration:

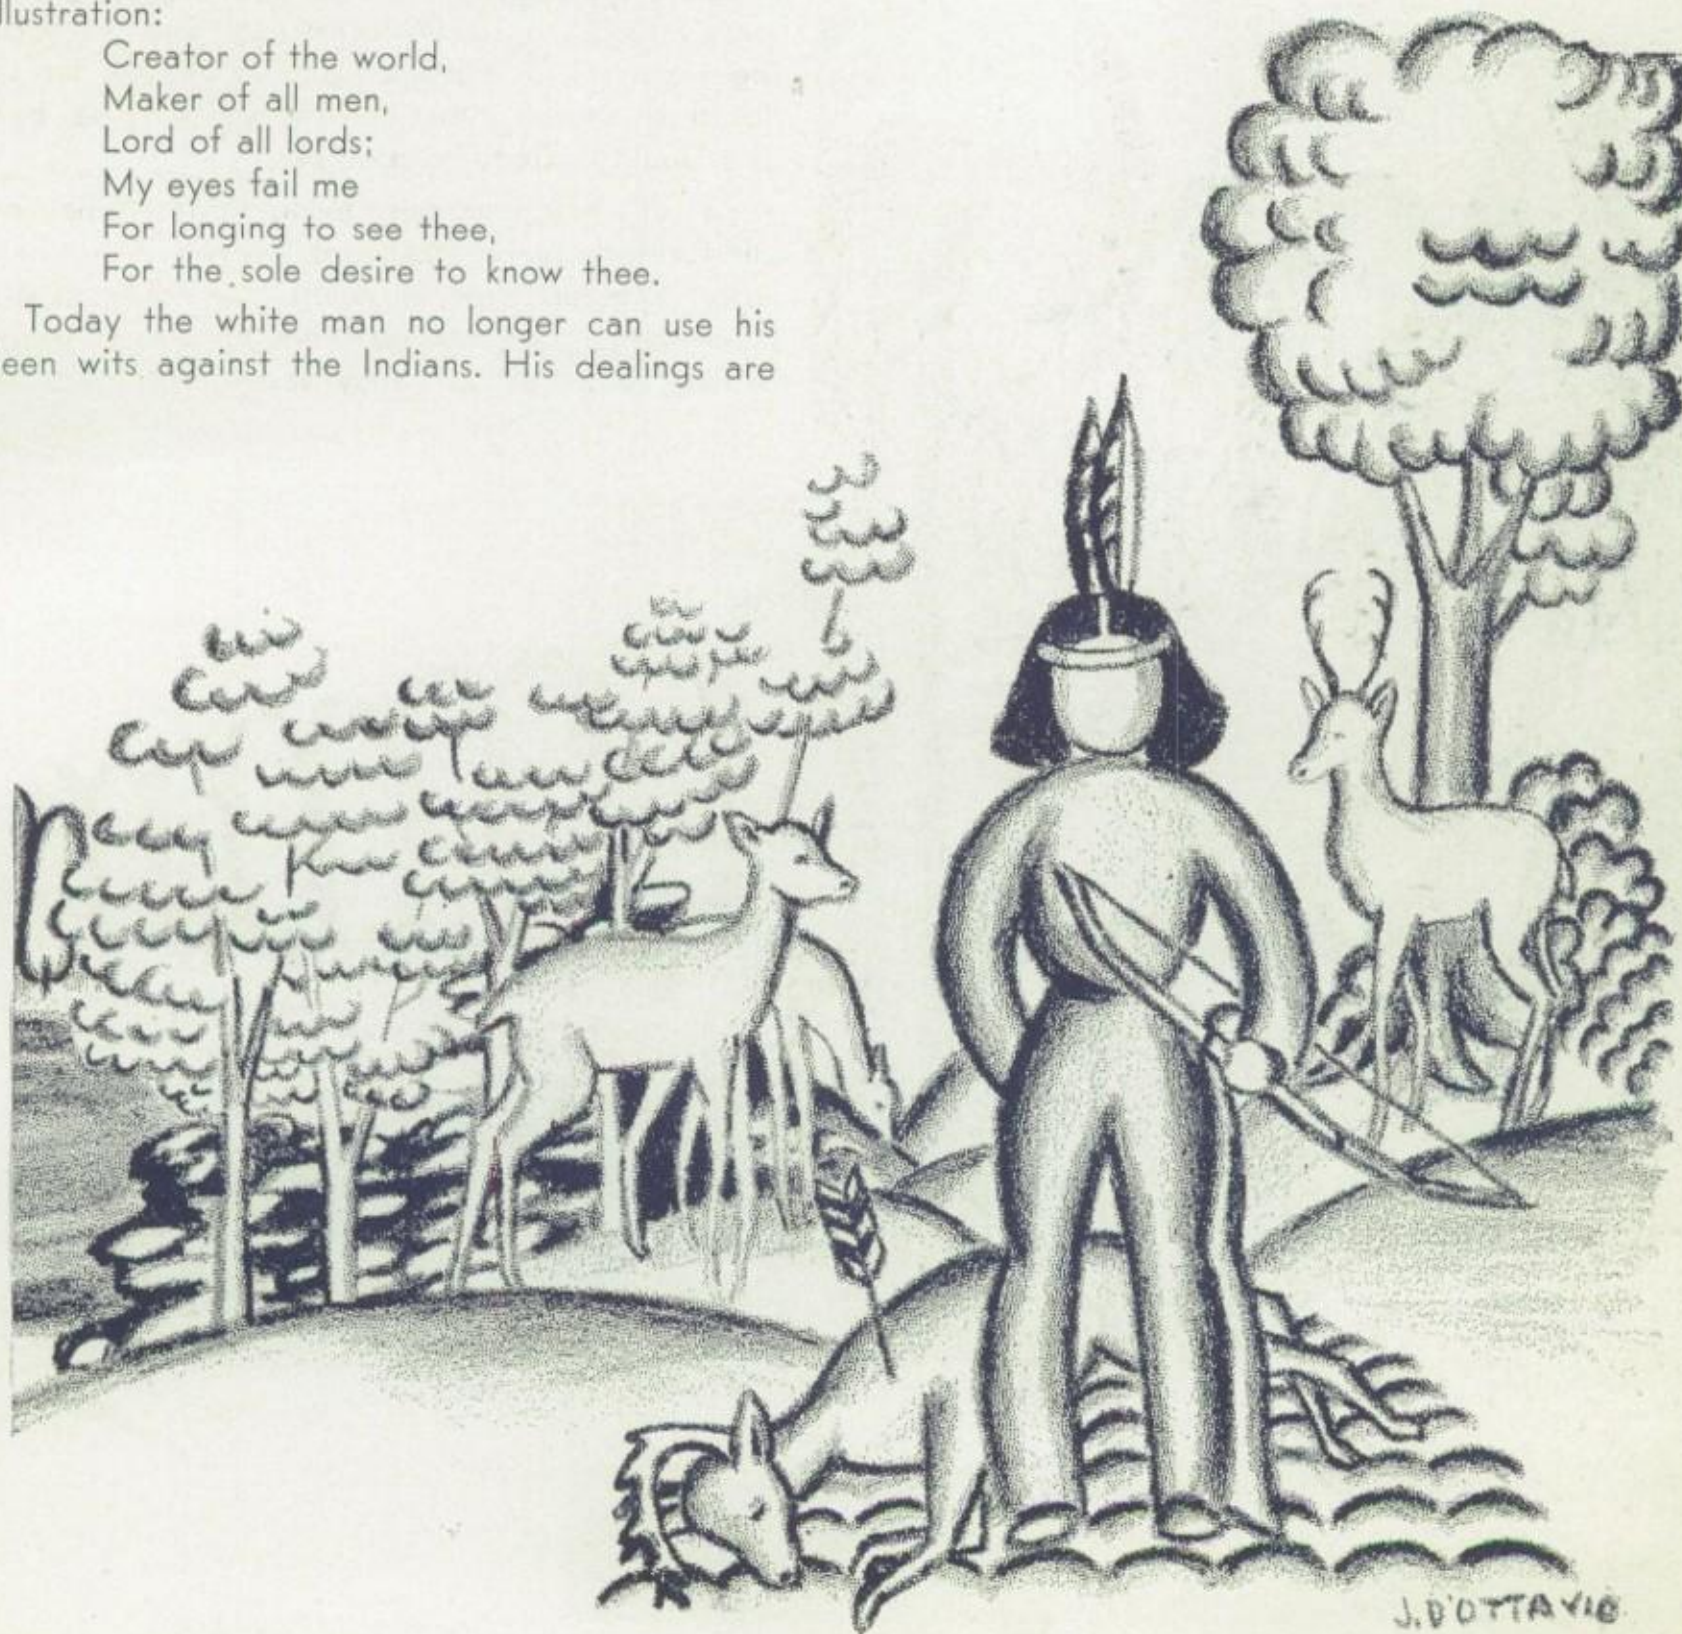

Creator of the world,
Maker of all men,
Lord of all lords;
My eyes fail me
For longing to see thee,
For the sole desire to know thee.

Today the white man no longer can use his keen wits against the Indians. His dealings are carried on through government officials who guard them as a mother protects her children. Today the Indian is being educated as you and I. Many are even studying in colleges and universities. Possibly some day these people shall not be under our guidance but shall be permitted to live among us as citizens.

From "Hiawatha," from their many legends, and from Indian traditions we have borrowed freely; and these we have woven into the fabric of our book. We have applied this to our art, our literature, our articles on clubs and organizations, giving the best that our high school talents can render. We honestly hope that through our whole-hearted efforts we have done justice in a humble way to the Indian—and to his culture.

THANK YOU, ALL

Do you know that there are sold in a year approximately 6,400 copies of the Fenger Courier, which represents you? It is also reported to have the largest circulation of any high school or college book in the United States. A book of as great importance as this required much time and a strong sense of responsibility on the part of all persons concerned. The Courier Staff feels that our book would never be a success without the generous support of the faculty, students, and the community!

Mr. Smith and Mr. Dasher, may we at this time express our deepest appreciation for your strong support and your infinite understanding of our numerous problems.

May we extend to you, Miss Robinson, our very deepest appreciation for your energetic, seemingly untiring efforts, and splendid guidance throughout the past semester. We feel that without your most whole hearted coöperation and precise judgment, our book could not be what it is today.

For your most loyal backing, we owe you a large vote of thanks, Mr. Cook and Miss Glavin of Curtis, Miss Gallagher and Miss Fowler of Mt. Vernon, and Miss Wilson of Burnside. To you, Miss Marlin and your Advanced Art classes, we owe our most grateful thanks for your great interest and the production of all the art in our book. We have been told that the drawings in our Couriers have a professional style,—all credit to you. Also, Mr. Arpee, we are indebted to your vast knowledge and aid in our interpretations used in our theme, "The Indians." Miss Fluke, we would also like to express our gratitude to you and your library assistants, who so willingly aided us in our search through books on Indian lore.

To you, Mr. Koerner and Mr. Zinngrabe, for so graciously giving of your time and materials, thanks also. We are indebted to you, Mr. Kehoe, and your printing classes, for your industrious and helpful contributions of printing and supplies. Mr. Beals, and all your stage crew, we owe our sincerest gratitude for your splendid help during picture taking week, and innumerable other times. How could we get along without you! We also wish to express our indebtedness to Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. Campbell, Miss McKenna, Miss Schmid, and Mrs. O'Donnell, for use of records, statistics, supplies, and care of our money, which has proved invaluable to us.

We thank you, Miss Taylor and the News Staff, for publicity and many other little favors which contributed to the success of the book. Again, we owe much to all of you kind people—for noonday announcements by Mr. Smitter, Mr. Koecker, Mr. Wagenman, and Mr. Brill; to the literary sponsors, Mrs. Wise, Miss Dunker, Miss DeHaan, Miss Edinger, Mrs. Donhaue, Miss Mildred Taylor, Miss Korten, Miss Stevens, Miss Jacobson, Mrs. McNamara, Miss McCabe, Miss Stevenson, Miss Glavin, Miss O'Sullivan, Miss Petrich, Miss Margaret Taylor, Mrs. Mettel, Mrs. Whitworth, Miss Lundquist, Miss McKirdie, Miss Milburn, Miss Conner, Miss Smart, Miss Verhoeven, who were judges of the literary contest; the results of your labors appear in section of our book.

THE BLAZED TRAIL

As the smoke from the flaring campfire twisted slowly to the star-studded moonlit sky above, Roy Tullgren, president of the Student Council, and all the 4A chiefs, Edward Schubert, Shirley Johnson, Walter Bluck, John Farneti, Edward Maltman, Paul Sytsma, Casimir Zajkowski, Ethel Geiger, Elwyn Ahnquist, Joe Fazio, Bruno Zordan, Robert Ball, Vollie Fletcher, Raymond Hylander, and John Genis sat wrapped in memories of the past. Sitting by the side of the chief were the members of the council, Robert Osterberg, Dorothy Polley, Donald Griffin, Alice Streelman, Clelia Desidero, Kenneth Engstrom, Shirley Selby, Wayne Wallis, and Norman Phillips. Present at this ceremony were Viola Sharkey and Merle Thomas, co-editors, and all the members of the Courier Staff. Instead of news traveling by smoke signals, Lois Grayston, Miriam Dempsey, Elaine Loch and Frances Dalenberg, through the Fenger News, have kept Fengerites informed of all that went on in Fenger.

The chiefs, as they sat on the shores of the gleaming lake bordered with pine trees, remembered their first days of high school. They were no longer children—they were growing up and had to shoulder responsibilities. The old methods were gone and a new and larger organization was working.

When these chiefs were but braves at the branches, things had gone at a rapid pace. At Mt. Vernon and Curtis, amateur shows and operas had been held. In the amateur show were Naomi Berg, Marcella Madderom, Shirley De Young, and Aldo Bechaz, and in the opera "The Emerald Isle" were Carol Lees, Evelyn De Boer, Peter Tanis, Bette Boughan, and Denise Behrens. An Honor Club had been organized at Mt. Vernon; and John Wilson, Cornelius Roeda, Lois Hansen, Eloise Luedeking, and Carol Minicus had been among those that elected Marcia Dittgen the first president. From the tribe of Burnside had come Virginia Antanaitis, winner of the D.A.R. medal, Theodore Bollman, Gloria Magram, and Marie Lennon.

Sitting tall and straight with sinewy muscles rippling, these braves and maids were examples of the Fenger Athletic Associations. When the girls and boys had entered Fenger, they had begun working for their G.A.A. and B.A.A. letters. Rewarded had been Ellen Nolan, Mildred Kohnke, Mary Carr, Gertrude Preuss, Victor Verkinden, Max Mullen, Harry Anderson, Victor Gentile, Donald Griffin and a host of others. The last president of the G.A.A. was Jennie Fanizzo.

Down the river in their birch canoes the chiefs had paddled into their sophomore year, and drifted into the first meeting of the Travel Club. Irene and Lucille Groncki, Carol Hedberg, Victoria Lackenberg, and Doris Lund were of the tribe of charter members. They had continued to serve the club, and as a reward, had received their Travel Club emblems.

The chiefs recalled the fame and honor that came to Fenger when Donald Griffin had blazed like a meteor across the sky into the football channels of the news. Wayne Wallis, Alfred Bohn, Paul Lucas, and John Genis were among those who had fought to bring home the City Football Championship in 1938. In 1939, these same boys had brought home the co-championship. Chosen queen to represent Fenger at Soldier's Field had been Evelyn Nanfeldt.

While still in our third year, our genial principal, Mr. Schacht, had retired and Mr. Smith ably filled his place.

Angeline Caruso, Carol Lees, Nancy Tucker, Miriam Dempsey, Otto Krauyalis, Dina De Vries, Lois Ackerman, Marjorie Briggs, Amos Swanberg, Karin Dandy, Alice Clement, Walter Bluck, and Mildred Pearson, wear the emblem representing scholastic achievement. For seven consecutive semesters they had had E's or S's in their major subjects and they had been granted the privilege of retaining their Phorex pins.

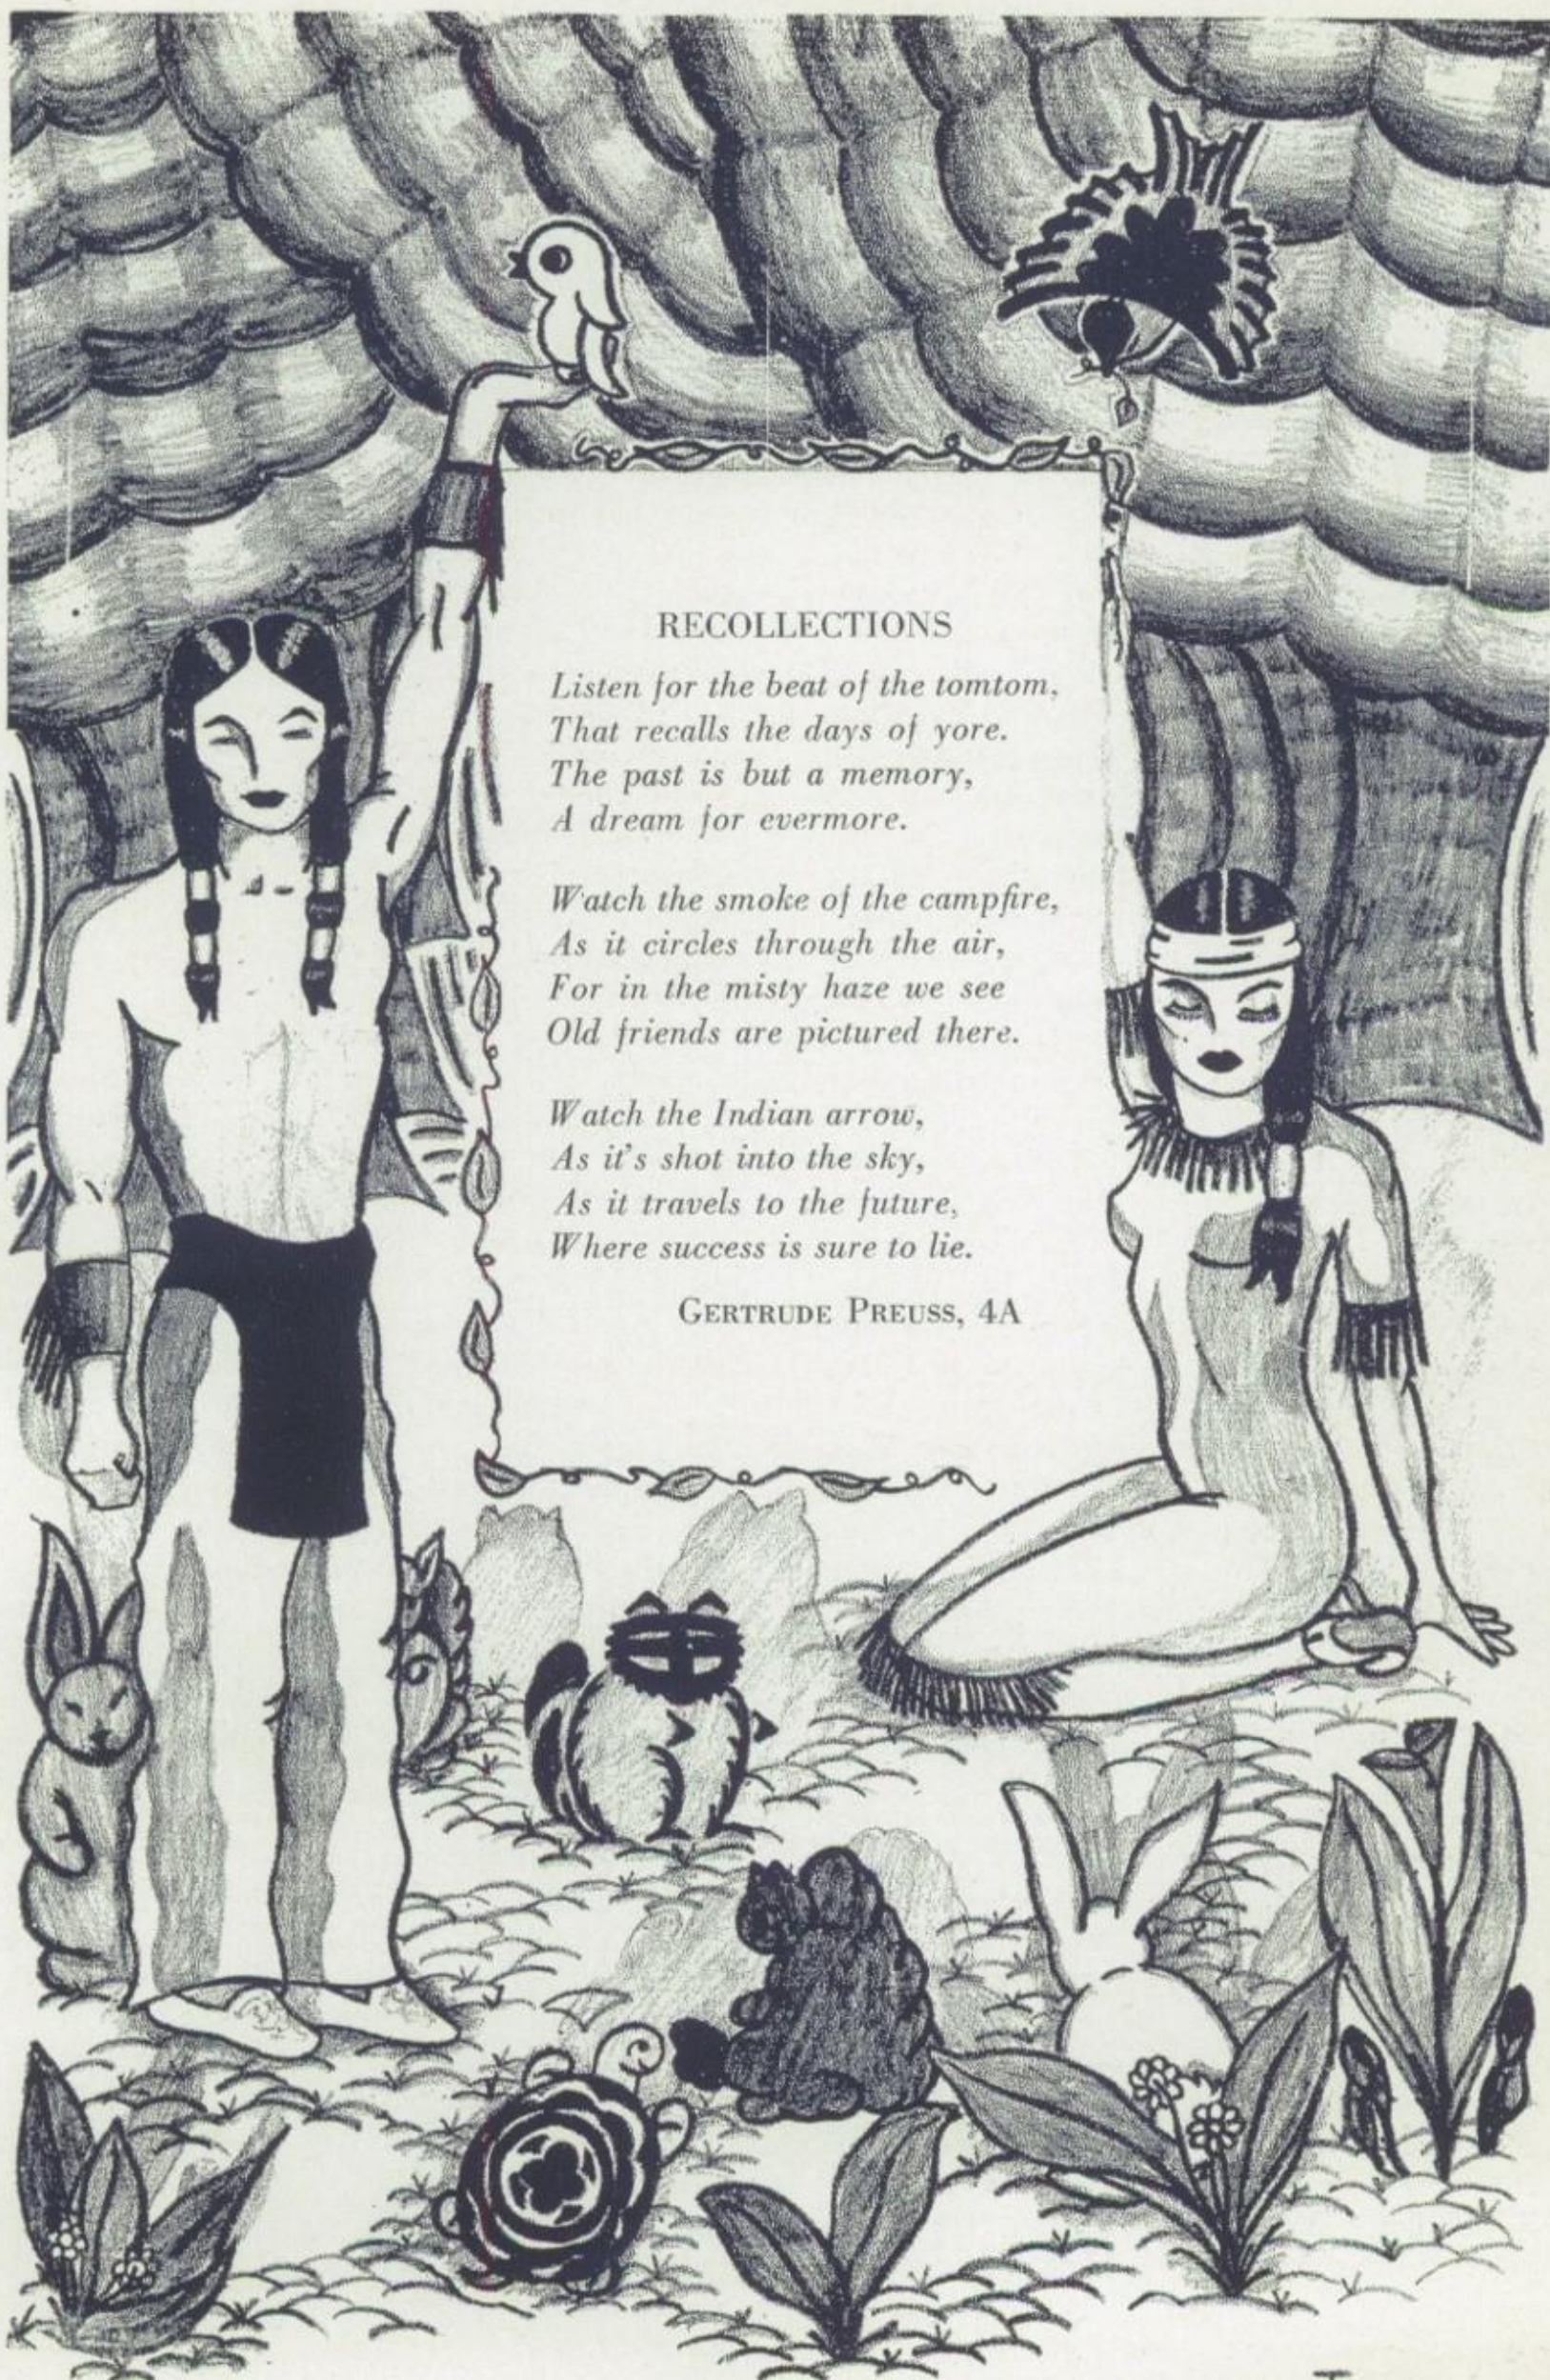

As the firelight threw weird and grotesque shadows on their bronze glistening bodies, the chiefs reviewed the R.O.T.C. which had played an important part in this project. The braves had learned to obey orders as well as give them. Among those who had achieved high honors in the R.O.T.C. had been Gregor Larsen, Jack Kilroy, Andrew Morrison, Andrew Marsch, Wade Macfarlane, and Robert Steubing.

The fire still glowing brightly; and smoking their pipes, these braves not only relived their hunting and warring expeditions; but also recalled how they had enjoyed themselves among their friends. The students of Fenger had not occupied their entire time with studies and sports, but many of them had spent much time and effort in presenting the Orchestra Varieties and Amateur Show or Talent Review. Appearing before the floodlights had been Thelma Norton, Eleanor Legg, Marjorie Bohr, Norma Jean Brady, Winona Roesing, and Istalena Williford.

The choral concerts and drama plays had also been gala nights. In the musical field Stanley Paul, Wayne Wallis, and Elwyn Ahnquist had held their own, while in the dramatic field, Eleanor Gerlofson, James Hills, Lois Ackerman, and Roy Boedeker had been put in the talented class.

As the embers of the fire burn low, the chiefs sit silently musing. Thus they reviewed four years which had flown by in study, work, and play. The smoke from the dying embers seemed to be a symbol of all the ghosts of the past, and the hopes of the future.

RECOLLECTIONS

*Listen for the beat of the tomtom,
That recalls the days of yore.
The past is but a memory,
A dream for evermore.*

*Watch the smoke of the campfire,
As it circles through the air,
For in the misty haze we see
Old friends are pictured there.*

*Watch the Indian arrow,
As it's shot into the sky,
As it travels to the future,
Where success is sure to lie.*

STUDENT COUNCIL

"Who shall guide you and shall teach you,
Who shall toil and suffer with you.
If you listen to your councils,
You will multiply and prosper;
All your strength is in your union."

Song of Hiawatha—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

Although the great Indian councils were practically sufficient unto themselves, each administering its own government, providing its own duties, beliefs, and customs, yet all had many characteristics in common and provided harmony among the tribes. This is also true of our Student Council with the eighty-four division rooms sending to it their representatives and its various departments. Dorothy Polley's splendid work as secretary, Kenneth Engstrom's efficiency in handling fire drills, Norman Phillip's improvement in our lunchroom, Robert Osterberg's life saving "lost and found" and splendid supervision of the hallguards, Wayne Wallis' Arbor Day program, Clelia Desidero's representing us in the P.T.A., Donald Griffin and Shirley Selby's splendid handling of the athletic department, Alice Streelman's valuable support as Publicity Representative have brought honor to our council.

Faithfully, the room presidents have acted as emissaries for both the students and faculty in the transaction of Student Council business. Youth reigned during the week of April 22-27. Students enjoyed assemblies, participated in athletics, and gained experiences in running their own school. All this could not have been possible without the cooperation of the faculty, Student Body, Miss Shine, and Mr. Reich, our sponsors. To them we are deeply grateful for a pleasant, progressive, and successful semester.

EARLY RISING

The most beautiful time in the whole day is the moment when the sun is just peeping over a pine-covered hill and shining down on a small, clear lake. This is the time to get up early, take a canoe, and go out on the lake to enjoy the glorious breaking of dawn. Or if there doesn't happen to be a canoe handy, just go for a walk. The scent of the stately pines and the sound of the birds calling to each other are enough to make your heart cry with joy. The sun breaks into bright rays, shining through the gossamer spider webs. A flash of red on a white breast as a Rose-breasted Grosbeak glides from one tree to another. Perhaps if you're lucky you'll see a deer, and maybe even a fawn. Oh! how peaceful everything seems. All your troubles are forgotten, and you wander on at peace with the world. These are some of the glorious sights and feelings of an early riser.

OUR DESTINIES

Our destinies—
Our predetermined lot,
Fate's dealings,
The inevitable necessity.
Shall we be rich?—
Or poor.
Shall we be famed?—
Or disgraced.
Shall we have power?—
Or futility;
Peace or turbulence;
Health or sickness;
Long life or quick death?—
We know not.
We are but putty in the hands of fate.

R.O.T.C.

This semester began with an enrollment of three hundred and thirty-eight cadets in the Fenger unit, the enrollment having been cut down from four hundred and twenty last year in order to provide for greater efficiency in the unit.

Honor School! That which had been almost within reach many times but always managed to get away, has finally decided to stay at Fenger. The old proverb, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again," fits in perfectly with the story of the Fenger unit's struggles to win this coveted honor. Our unit did "try, try again" for thirteen years and in the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth their efforts were rewarded. In the annual inspection Fenger was judged one of the best drilled units in the Sixth Corps Area which includes the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan. As a reward for their efforts, each member of the unit is permitted to wear the red star of honor above the R.O.T.C. patch on the sleeve.

A Commissioned Officers Club was organized soon after the semester began. Meetings are held daily under the supervision of Sgt. William P. Robinson. Problems in drill and other military topics are brought up and discussed. Also a weekly test is given to keep the officers on their toes. All the officers realize their responsibilities and carry them out in the best way possible. This, together with the willingness of the cadets to learn, has earned the unit a name in the community.

The Fenger Cadets are proud of the Fenger Unit of the R.O.T.C., and this is the main reason that this organization is one of the most active in the school. Its ideals of building true and patriotic citizens are being closely followed. This is the reason that the R.O.T.C. is the Pride of the School.

You need a pass—My pretty lass!

Much like the faithful, watchful Indians are our hallguards who are placed strategically throughout the halls and who help to enforce the school regulations with their familiar question, "Have you a pass?" The duties of our "Guardians of the Halls" are many and varied; such as, directing a lost freshman to the lunchroom, picking up a scrap paper, or answering the questions of visitors. This requires both tact and courtesy. These students have volunteered their services during their free periods.

The system of having the letter girls assist in supervising the halls was found satisfactory and has been continued. Betty Higgins—4A

Is music one of your greatest pleasures? If it is, there is no better way through which you can find musical enjoyment and develop your instrumental ability than by becoming a member of the Senior Band. In its R.O.T.C. uniforms, the Senior Band frequently takes part in the assembly programs by the rendition of stirring marches and overtures under the baton of Captain William R. Burnham. Many accomplished players can be claimed by this organization, headed by Lawrence Friedsam, Trombonist; Emil Nigro, Trumpeter; and Norman Phillips, French Hornist, who

At the tap of the baton the musicians quiet down after making sure they are in tune. This is a common scene in the orchestra room as the Fenger Orchestra begins its daily practice under the direction of Mr. Trimble. Through his association in this group Norman Phillips has won high honors playing his French horn in the Solo Instrumental Contest and is eligible for the National Contest. Too, Nancy Tucker has been the pianist for six semesters. Many other outstanding players, over numerous to mention, make

The Junior Orchestra is a group of industrious young musicians striving to be admitted into the advanced orchestra. Most of its forty members began playing at the Fenger Branches with Mr. Trimble as director. A group has been organized at Curtis under Miss Connors, and Mt. Vernon is also a source of talent for the future Advanced Orcehstra. Among the many promising members here at the main building are Edward Pokorney and Edward Honel with their trumpets, June Long and Sarah Bruno playing the violin, and Marion Levin with the cello, Ilamae Gibson with the saxophone, and Arnold Hoenke the viola. NEWSROOM ACTIVITIES

In the days of Hiawatha, across the American plain and through the American forest sounded the rhythmic beat of drums carrying news from Indian tribe to tribe throughout this land. Now as the stalwart brave has seemingly vanished, we carry news by paper.

Let us consider the Fenger News as a tribal drum beaten by the drummers, or News Representatives, who bid the tribe lend an attentive ear. The News Representatives bolster the sales and do a capable job in handling money. Composed of eighty-four, this group is found one in each division; and all deserve rewards for their cooperation.

Now we come to the staff. Let us say that they are the counsellors who authenticate the news relayed by the drums. The executives must act as the guides to these counsellors. Managing Editor, Lois Grayston; Assignment Editors, Miriam Dempsey and Elaine Locht; and Business Manager, Frances Dalenberg have under them a capable staff of fifty-seven members. Literary Editors, Marcia Dittgen and Mildren Pearson; Feature Editors, Margie Michalski, and Ellen Dailey; Interview Editors, Helen Jane Frew and Elaine Host are the only executives that have not been mentioned. These students, with Otto Krauyalis, constitute the head of the Fenger News.

The journalism class of thirty-six members is preparing to assume the tasks of the present staff when it retires. Under Miss Taylor's tutelage this class learns the principles of editorial, news, features, humor, page make-up, and proof reading.

4B FORWARD

We, the 4B class, are now approaching the end of our high school day. We should pause here and look back upon our past mistakes so that we may be benefited by them. These mistakes should help us alter our ways so that we may gain the highest possible scholastic record within our ability when we enter the last semester of high school.

It is in our last semester that we are watched the most and are supposed to set the standards of the school. If we make these standards and follow them ourselves the rest of the school will follow.

It is in our last semester that we are expected to set the standards of the school. We will maintain them ourselves and try to be an example for the rest of the pupils.

Ray Ludwig—4B

"Out of childhood into manhood
Now had grown my Hiawatha,
I am going, I, Nokomis,
On a long and distant journey,
To the portals of the sunset,
To thy regions of the home-wind,
Of the Northwest wind Keewaydim."

Song of Hiawatha—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

EARLY RISING

There ought to be a law against it! When the alarm rings, you turn to look at the clock, and then wish you were still sleeping. Doctors say it's healthy, and very good for you, to arise early but common sense disagrees. Sleep makes one beautiful, and it stands to reason that the longer you sleep, the more beautiful you would become.

Scientists say that we spend one-third of our life in bed, but we all wish it could be longer. Why if all the hours of sleep lost by Fenger students that come for eight o'clock classes were laid end to end, they would form a veritable lifetime. Few people get their proper rest, and at the end, this will shorten their lives. Imagine, missing five-to-ten years of living because of eight o'clock classes, and early working hours.

And, then too, think of the mental strain early rising puts us under. When the alarm goes off, we have to struggle, mentally, with ourselves to get up—at least I do. Half-awake and half-asleep, I have to persuade myself that it really is time and that I really have to get up. But I usually lose my argument and settle back to continue my snooze. Not for long, though, because someone always is there to see that I do get up. Someday, I believe I will become a hermit, with no one to poke me and prod me to see that I arise. But, then too, a hermit has no reason to arise in the wee hours of the morning, when the sun is just peeking over the distant hills and the dew lies on the grass.

Some forward looking politician could easily be elected to the legislature by using a "sleep-late" platform—"My friends, if I am elected, I will abolish eight o'clock classes; I will abolish all morning working hours; I will put a chicken in every kettle and a human in every bed. We will all sleep till noon, every noon." This man would surely be elected. Yes, sir, there ought to be a law against early rising!

JUNIOR OBSERVATION—3A

The Indians developed their power of concentration to the highest degree. George Douglas, Gordon Kramer, Edo Magitto, August Underwall, and Carmella Galullo adopt this policy for studying. Adelaide Czyz and Robert Kauk suggest fixing one's mind on how the subject is written in the book. The lure of a quiet room by oneself is the ideal of James Kondroth, Doris Ferry, La Rae Ausherman, Agnes Corrorna, Marie Da Corte, Gladys Earnshaw, William Bence, Constance Rolando, Esther Johnson, and Roy Krause for preparing the next day's lesson. Sally Lockwood is quoted as saying, "Over somebody else's shoulder." The solution Lorraine Meginnis, Ruth Rosser, and Louis Aiello, offer is to read the subject and then to answer the questions. Orest Mencinsky doesn't know much about the subject, or at least he won't commit himself.

Redmen were very fond of music and before going out on any event or doing anything of importance, they sought inspiration through the tribal music. So with Vera Oherg, Bonnie Bimrose, Frank Reihel, Helen Emery, Mary Kelly, and La Verne Wehling who prefer music with their studying; while Audrey Sidler, Ethel Sitas, Carol Adams, and Olga Schypc think that a little snack is needed to help stimulate the brain. Alex Adduci would like to have radios installed in all the classrooms, but according to Shirley Koch the radio doesn't help matters at all.

Emotions and reactions were not shown by the Redman, but we have here the way different people act when quick thinking is called for. George Hahn would act on an impulse, while Gene Andrews, and Eugene Wold would stop to think. Charles Kasper's idea is to run, and ask questions afterwards. Joe Medo, Ann Verbyla, Wendell Elias, Hattie Schultz, and George Rosenfeld would act naturally, but Bruno Mazzacovatto, Catherine Savio, Eleanor Masier, Katherine Lucchin, and Lorraine Brogan would break out in a nervous sweat. Panic seizes Virginia Balzar, Victoria Tomaaszerski, Earlene Covent, and Evelyn Kaster. According to Gerald Lynch, Adeline Rizzolo, Louis Fischer, Jeanette Moll, William Meyering, John Merkel, George Miller, June Horne, and James Braschler, their minds work like a flash. Bruno Battistin and Fred Zawada would be rendered speechless, but Fern Cichhol would pass out completely. A case of stutters develops for Olga Baldassar, Esther Meyerchick and Irene Jemiola. Elizabeth Toth would become petrified and let matters take their course. Doing the wrong thing is what inevitably happens to Elaine George and Walter Simons. Larry Balku and Catherine Boyle try to respond in the best possible way. "No mercy would be shown the gum," comes from Lillian Swedson. Esther Westhind's mind would be a perfect blank, and Jane Mattox would do whatever would come to her mind.

The Indians were very proud of their possessions and homes and tried to improve them in every possible way, and so we wondered what the students of Fenger thought about their "Alma Mater" and ways of bettering it.

"It's perfect" is the expression used by Patricia Chessman, Lucy Bidese, John Mihalak, Rosemary Kienes, Mary Jane Veitch, and Rose Bozaley. Fenger is the best school in town in the estimation of Anna Lynch, Dorothy Fiddelke, and Arthur Kapillian. Comes the suggestion of a better hall system from Jeanne Yarnell, Jacqueline Finney, Margaret Gyare, Wutt, Pearl Omick, Ed Misnialiegicz, Thurman Grafton, Frances Fisher, and Edna Kross. Don Berry wants a longer time to get to classes. The improvement of the locker system comes from Mike Pyk and Ed Stakenas. Beryl De Winter's comment is that the bell system should be in line for a change. We have a few lazy people in school, for Arlene Bergner, Frances Barnes, Shirley La Course, Erna Bauer, and June Pioliert want elevators. Soap in the washrooms would help everybody keep nice, shining faces is the suggestion of Ruth Fraley. Marilyn Orno, Elsie Roneaglione and Lorraine Harts want the cleaning of the rooms finished.

It takes much to get a member of the red race to talk, but it is a common practice among the other races to tell strangers the "Story of Their Lives." Why is this so?

"They want to be friendly, and talking helps," observes Dorothy Soodeestrom, Josephine Wozniat, Sylvia Wawrzynak, and Ninalee Haidekrueger. Marie Krapil, Alfred Chris, Rose Michuda, Chuck Bolduc, Lois Bandstra, and Clara Giroti say it's because they want to start a conversation, but Raymond Lipke, Eleanor Kehhiker, Daniel Wall, Arlene Rasmussen, Dorothea Mills, Ed Burke, and Bertil Nelson think they want to brag. Some people get lonesome while traveling, and so they turn to a fellow traveller. This is the thought of Jane Rufschnneider and Frances Baskis. No one else will listen to them say Irene Keappler, Shirley Klaris, Helen Friberg, and Florence Smith. Helen Teerlink, Claude Wise, and Rena Leffrink arne't sure just why people do it, but Mildred Dal Santo, Joe Kredens, Lillian McHugh, Vera Sand, Catherine Daven, and Bill Cook are of the opinion that they want sympathy. Ann Matecho and Marian Spinak come to the conclusion that they never expect to see the other person again. Popkin Simonian, Steven Bonom, John Violet, Donna Rose Parker, and Pete Buwalda seem to think that some people just never stop talking while Edward Datronik guesses that they are just trying to waste somebody's time. To settle this Marie Marx has this philosophy, "After all, isn't life a story?"

MY LAST BLIND DATE

Thanksgiving came early that year. But that didn't bother me. I had a blind date for that evening. My first, and my last; for who would ever want to go on a blind date again after what happened.

I was ready on time for once. In fact I was ready with time to spare. Too much time—Good old Lois had fixed it up, and he was supposed to be a swell fellow, but somehow one important detail about the time had been left out. But I was patient; very patient. My mother seemed more worried than I was, so I killed a little time trying to reassure her.

"He's a swell fellow, Mother. Lois says so." Maybe he was, but I never found out and don't expect to.

Lois slept rather later than usual the next morning. Oh! yes, she had a good time. And what happened to him?

Why, he had changed his mind, and me? Had I waited for him very long?

Who, me? No, only until I went to bed which was rather later than usual that night. Oh! I'm a very patient person.

A LOOK INTO 3B ACTIVITIES

The witch doctor was doing a dance to the gods when suddenly there appeared before him a vision of some people, white people. They seemed to be walking about in a strange brick building, and as he stopped in amazement he heard them speaking among themselves. He moved nearer to one group and heard a girl asking her fellow beings, "What activities in school occupy the greater part of your time? Just why are you attracted to these certain ones?"

"Well," says William Helson, "for building up the body, wrestling does wonders." "Baseball and volleyball is my choice," claims Tom Nelson. Eleanor Dapkus, a regular outside girl, likes to play baseball and volleyball. Swimming in the cool aqua appeals to mermaid Lucille Autenrieth. Inis McCracklin and Reno Costalunga are basketball fans because, "it's rough and tough." Baseball has two more supporters in Anton Gleir and Matthew Spagnola. The B.A.A. has as members Benjamin Scretchions and Frank Gardner.

The Redman listened in perplexity to these strange and new things that the children were discussing. "There are many clubs to join," pipes up Joyce Feuillin, "and I for one pick the Stamp Club." "Ting-aling," sings Mary Hunter, and then she goes on to explain that she is all for the Piano Club. The Fenger Forum is chosen by Dorothea Potter and Marilyn Ellis, who like to put on plays and learn about customs of long ago. Charles Emmour and Joseph Aliosius think along the practical lines of life, hence, the Science Club for them. "I like music, and in the band my desire is satisfied," remarks Robert Simner. The Letter Girls Club attracts Marion Geany. "For acquiring poise, the Fencing Club will help," advised Florence Napoli. With buttons all ashine, up marches Walter Black of the R.O.T.C.

The Indian hears peculiar music coming from the room across the hall and goes there to investigate. As he approaches he hears discussion going on as to what sort of music appeals to people in various moods, such as gay, blue, dreamy, happy? Tony Maldara is saying, "When in a gay mood, I like fast songs," and Margaret McBeth, Walter O'Keefe, and Rebelle Osello nod their heads in approval. He goes on to say, "Waltzes are just the thing when in a dreamy mood; for instance, listening to Wayne King, but Edith Holm interrupts to say that she likes symphony. When in a blue mood, Olga Davidenas prefers organ music. Lorraine Buwalda has this idea—she would like something gay. "And when I'm happy," La Verne Larson says, "I like to hear the Wedding March."

Becoming intrigued with all the unusual sights about him, the Indian walked up to another group in which the students were voicing their opinion as to what would be their choice if they had a chance to go either to Alaska or Virgin Islands after they graduate. With a sparkle in her eyes Dorothy Englin says, "Virgin Islands for me because of the handsome men." John Trentacosti, Bill Waldner, and Clarence Keksta think that the scenery in the Virgin Islands would be very beautiful. Cocoanuts and bananas attract Bertha Wood. Blanche Majowski's ambition is to go to Alaska and see the Mounted Police. The snow could be delightful for Mabel Anderson, Sophie Opyt, and Dorothy Wyrkowski, but the warm weather of the Virgin Islands is just to the liking of Bette Bellus, Jerry Hubsheid, Dorothy Walker and Clarence Wagner. "I think it would be fun to live in an igloo," remarked Doris Ulrich, but Shirley Nelson replied, "I would rather live on an island in a grass hut." "Go to Alaska and get rich," chorused Joseph Pavek, Paul Kseryulak, and Albert Beffo. Dorothy Yonker thinks that the Virgin Islands has many opportunities, while B. Crummie has the same idea about Alaska. Solomon Jessen looks up and gives his opinion, "Alaska is a swell place to trap and hunt," to which George Echmedel retorts, "Plenty of swimming on the Islands." "Alaska sounds pretty good to me from what I hear," states Oris Vitt. "I imagine you will find plenty to write home about from Alaska," ponders W. Dugan. Then Jean Ackerman comes out with, "I would like to go to Alaska because it is close to the United States, and I could get back easier." The vision suddenly faded from the witch doctor's eyes, and he was left to ponder on his view into the future world.

WINDS IN MY HAIR

The wild wind, as if without a care,
Ruffled and mussed my light, brown hair.
It swept across the street so wide,
To catch the children who were trying to hide.

And, as I felt it blow through my hair,
It seemed to say, as if in a dare,
"Come with me to the seaside shore,
I'll blow through your hair forever more."

AN OUTING EXERCISE

The moon rose, as every good-natured, well behaved moon should rise, over the snow-crested, purple-hued mountains; and the sun set, rather tiredly, for it had been working hard all day sunburning various ill-natured and good-natured people alike.

Yes, the North Woods, invaded by a few stray mountains left over from the last earthquake, is certainly a place to relax. Of course, different people define "relaxation" in many different ways. Relaxation may be scrubbing and scraping off, very industriously, the barnacles and stuff which has accumulated on your sail boat since the last wind blew strong enough to give you a whirl for your money. Or, relaxation may be lounging around doing nothing, thinking nothing (as if you had ever thought before), and eating everything. However, whatever you may do for relaxation doesn't concern me, for I like to do definite things. I had read the book, "Ten Easy Lessons on How to Become a True Woodsman," sale price $.50, and had decided to try my hand at making a matchless fire while I was on my camping trip. My results, though, weren't very encouraging, nor were they in the nature of what the book had described.

June nights are supposed to be very romantic, but I wasn't in that mood, or even near it because as darkness and the damp, murky cold came creeping, as it customarily does in Minnesota in the early or late spring, I was getting more and more vexed at the failure of my efforts to make a matchless fire. Not only was I cold, but my stomach was about the area of an underfed prune. And more than that, "things" were peeping at me through holes in the forest, and I'm a modest person after all. This went on for quite a while, finally not being a full-blooded or even half-blooded Indian, I fished in my pocket and brought forth some blessed matches and proceeded to make my fire, using for paper "Ten Easy Lessons on How to Become a True Woodsman."

EARLY RISING

Nothing restores my faith in the world so quickly as the rising sun. The night holds terrors for me—shadows, lurking things, impressed in my mind since time began. It is no wonder that man worshipped the sun, dispeller of the clouds and eerie winds. The sun, awakening, turns the somber shadows into moving masses of color; all the cubes of night become the circles of day. When the sun pulls himself over the horizon with his golden ropes of light, I always greet him with a happy good morning because he is an old friend of mine. He changes my dull macrocosm of gray into a bright universe of light. I have many to share my good fortune—the farmer in his field, the man whistling his way to town, and the not-so-trampish hobo. All about me the tumbling breeze brings the sounds of stirring life, the movements of the too dead to live.

BOOTS AND SADDLE

Down from the hills we come riding,
Shouting our battle cry
Setting the echoes ringing
To the pounding of hoofs we're singing
Our challenge to the sky.

Sabres bare, in the morning air,
Spurs that gaily twinkle;
Foam flecked steeds, and noble deeds;
Men that follow their captain's lead.
"Boots and Saddle," their cry.

DAY DREAMING

I have heard the question, "Where did yesterday go?"

The answer, I'm sure, I do not know.

Thousands have asked,

Thousands have wondered;

Thousands have guessed,

And as many have blundered.

Where is the yesterday I met you, my friends?

Where is the yesterday our troubles did mend?

Where did it go?

Where does it stay?

Will it come back

Another day

Again the question, "Where did yesterday go?"

Again the answer, "I do not know."

People still wonder,

And try to foretell;

But only Father Time knows;

He keeps the secret well.

"Give me of your bark, O birch-Tree
Of your yellow bark, O Birch-Tree!
Growing by the rushing river,
Tall and stately in the valley!"

I, a light canoe will build me,
Build a swift cheemaun for sailing,
That shall float upon the river."

CHIEF ZAC-BE HEARS FROM THE 2A's

In the dim light of the campfire sits Chief Zac-Be and his counsellors four. Upon the four winds these braves ride to bring answers to the chief's question.

Silver-Tongue takes wing on the North wind to find, "What kind of a home would you like to build upon leaving school?" Many and varied are the answers he received.

Merlin Olsen and William Popp want Old English style homes. Joseph Gauguch would have a palace, while Gertrude Kurdtz will be satisfied with half a palace. Kenneth Madsen states that a match box will be his speed. Angeline De Salvo and William Balis are aiming high for they want a pent-house up in the sky. Annette Vandermeulen wants a small house, as does Vera Mellen-dorf. But Vera wants hers where she can be alone. Caryle Oedzes tells Silver-Tongue he would have a trailer, but would prefer one ready built. William Pittaway wishes for a log-cabin up north, and Helen Maslovitz wants a glass house. Roy Wagner is going to build the best home in the country, while Ferdinand Szostak is going to build the kind his wife wants. Silver-Tongue meets Barbara Pierce who will take a grass hut, and Elaine Waller who wants the bedrooms upstairs and a ping pong table downstairs. Marion Garinger wants a little white cottage by the shore. George Tone, Shirley Sexson, Norma Testolin, and June Noble all are going in for the modern trend in housing. Louis Fedor wants a quiet little peace on a battleship; in contrast, Ella Gatto will take a nice colonial house or cottage in the country.

Gliding along with the East wind goes Flute-Reed to learn, "What detracts from a person making a success of himself in high school?" The answers Flute-Reed gleans are very definite. He stops an active group. Robert Wilson and Ed Gobel are claiming girls are the cause, while Irma Werkman, Marie Faust, and Ruthe Perry are placing the blame on the boys. "Hello, there, George Carli, and Zygmund Piech. What's your opinion on this subject? Oh! You think it's lack of interest in school." "Attention or rather the lack of it is to blame," say Mabel Schroeder and Alma Kochigian. Flute-Reed finds another little group, Dolores Willette, Helen Freudenberg, Jean Hill, Ted Neofer, and June Lindberg is growling that it's puppy love. At a lunchroom table Flute-Reed gathers other opinions. Ruth Johansson feels that it is the "I don't care" view. Rose Marie Lasher meditates and finally states "Too many social activities." "Not doing home-work is quite a factor," according to Lorraine Lockwood. Diana Pammler just doesn't know, and Betty Givens voices her opinion as being, "You can't think too much of yourself." Ernest Mrencso, Kenneth Freitag, and Lessie Rush seem to think repetition of one's name on the absentee list leads to a sudden downfall.

With the ability of a Zepher, the stalwart brave, Little Bear rides the South wind to discover, "Who dislikes or likes what, and why?" To this strange query he receives odd answers.

Gerald Wolter doesn't like to wash dishes, while Shirley Schmidt enjoys music and sports. Mable Freeze likes murder stories and ice-cream. "Hello, Elizabeth Pedigo. What have you to say?" "Well, I don't like people who can't keep secrets either." Emma Busolo likes boys' clothes and chewing gum, and Helen Smock dislikes girls who giggle. Helen Roetzheim and Mildred Roetzheim like each other, but neither one knows why. Eugene Klimowki says he doesn't like much of any thing, and Harold Gottler agrees. Sophie Kominski dislikes gym 10th hour. Esther Worokis likes baseball and candy, while Edgar Host is the intellectual type, since he likes reading and English. Josephine Holcombe dislikes the sound of people snapping gum. Marilyn Dudley doesn't like squash, and Anna Wilk doesn't care for spinach. Elizabeth Harroun and Ruth Mulhoun dislike to stay late in school. Dorothy DeRoos just doesn't like to be called "Red."

Oh, keen-eyed, keen-eared Black Hawk, herald of the South wind, find answers to the chief's question, "What do you think of a person that is always borrowing?"

Charline Millwood, Paul Horvath, and Henry Mardoni think borrowers are all right, since they themselves borrow. Tony Ingala wishes the borrower was "The Little Man Who Wasn't There," and Bette Geottler and Gerry Goodman wish these people would buy their own things. Sharon Hord tells Black Hawk that it is all right to swap, while Mike Bruce says, "The borrower is pretty smart to get away with something for nothing." Earl Hess and Elizabeth Skip don't mind borrowers either. John Pierce and Carl Bergstrom claim they had better not say anything on this subject, due to their strong dislike for borrowers. Georgia Pace says she feels like refusing them, but she doesn't. Louis Roi, Sylvia Rossetti, and Lois Horn believe the borrower should buy his own, and Jane Schoenfeldt states that it is all right if one is paid back. The words of Dante Dalle Molle are "There ought to be a law against them." Betty Jane Kicks and Josephine Hudy say, "The borrower is just a plain sponger." Ethel Willis and Roy Campisi say they care very little for a person who is always borrowing.

With the last of the questions answered Chief Zac-Be's wishes have been fulfilled, and he and his four counsellors may retire.

HOW I LEARNED TO DRIVE

"How would you like to take the wheel?" the voice next to me said. I looked around. No, there was no other person in the car. It seemed like a dream, but my brother was talking to me. How would I like to take the wheel, was what he wanted to know. My ambition for years was to drive a real automobile, and here was my chance.

I jumped out the door and ran around the car twice before I could find the left side. I didn't care if the rest of the world wasn't there, just so I had the wheel in front of me and a road under the car.

Shifting was an art I mastered in a few minutes. Then I started the car. I knew how to shift and also how to use the clutch, but they just didn't seem to work together. I put it in first; I wanted to get it all over with in a hurry, so I could just roll along. Quickly I let up the clutch. The car jerked a few times, and I felt as if the road under me wasn't as stable as I had thought it to be. Maybe there was something wrong with the car was my first thought; but when I glanced at my brother, I could tell that it wasn't the car. It was I. I had let up on the clutch entirely too fast.

After this I learned just how to push on the gas peddle, and steer. The road seemed to wave from side to side in front of me. "Turn to the right," came from my brother, so I turned the wheel to the right. A tree was on the corner, a very beautiful tree, I thought. "Turn farther," came from my brother again, but it came too late. The beautiful tree was coming straight for me. It was the only tree for blocks around, and it had to be on this corner. My brother quickly grabbed the wheel, and turned it as hard as he could, and the tree sailed right by the side of the car. "The tree is still beautiful, and so is the car," I said meekly, and my brother gave a weak smile.

DAY-DREAMING

Lying on the grass so green,
Then is the time when I day-dream.
Gazing up at the clouds in the skies
Different dreams pass before my eyes.

I picture castles in those skies of blue,
Knights and horses, with plumes waving too.
Where are they going, these knights so brave?
Is it some poor one, from evils to save?

But while lying on that grass of jade,
The winds blow and my day-dreams fade.
But tomorrow I'll be back again,
And my dreams will again have reign.

SPRINGTIME JOYS

There's a hush in the early morning
When robins begin to sing,
And the tender grasses shoot upward
To welcome another spring;
And my heart is strangely quiet
For, I too, am glad to be Alive in this glorious springtime
Shedding its fragrance on me.
The world is full of sadness,
And men seem to struggle so
For things that are passing and useless,
While all around them grow—
The beautiful flowers of springtime,
God's gift to the children of earth.
If they had the eyes to see them,
Their world would have another birth.

NEW WORLDS TO CONQUER

Names like Balboa, De Soto, Ponce de Leon, even Thomas Edison, and "Teddy" Roosevelt had always inspired me to greater heights—new worlds to conquer.

But, because of some strange quirk inside of me, these things did not appeal to me, only the names struck a cord in my memory. My only solution was that these men did as they wanted; they explored—hunted—lived in luxury often. I wanted none of this—what I wanted was something to keep me busy—a hobby, most folks call it. Stamps, no; airplanes, no; coins—I tried but failed. What to do! Then came the inspiration. Why not the weather—that mystical thing that is all about us, but so few of us know and understand—here was a new world to conquer?

I came, I learned, I conquered—my roving spirit moved on once more. I answered its call—a new horizon, the theater. I wrote, directed, acted. Soon it was a dull, dead conceit, as was the weather. So this was also abandoned.

I have grown to know how the railroaders feel and live—how they walk and talk. It is a glorious new world I have conquered and will continue to conquer for it never ends. New locomotives are added—business conditions change—new "hogs" (engineers, to you) have come, the new changes with the old. Everyday it is a new world to conquer.

My roaming heart has, is, and will continue to roam—where it takes me the gods of luck and chance and fate only know. My search for new worlds has carried me to New York twice, and Canada four times. We are a nation ever looking for new scenes, new interests. I have found mine—the railroads. I am content to live the rough life they offer—the indescribable thrills. After all without some new world to conquer life would be "pretty" boring—now wouldn't it?

CHIEF KUTENAS SEARCH FOR KNOWLEDGE AMONG THE TRIBES OF AMERICA (2B's)

Into the North, into the South, into the East, and the West the runners of Chief Kutenas went. Each runner had a question to ask at every council fire of every village. The courier who went into the North, first arrived at the village of the Northern Blackfoot Tribe. There at the Council fire held in his honor, he asked the question, "What is the reaction of the tribe when hearing new slogans or mottos (This is Fenger)? (Do they designate a proud feeling of the tribe for the lodges and organizations?)"

One young Indian maid, named Red Rose, (Eloise Smith) from Big Bear Lodge, arose and waited till everything was still, and said, "I like the idea very much, and the only way I can live up to our motto is to follow the rules and obligations set up by the leaders of our lodge (Fenger High School) Squaw (Lorraine Lucas) agreed with a violent, Ugh!

Brave Live-Alone, (Erwin Frischksin) was of the opinion that the village (Fenger High School) was far too big and crowded to live in. But Little-Running-Deer (Jessie Campbell) explained to him that their village had to be large enough to accommodate the great body of Blackfoot Indians (Students).

We now leave the seeker of knowledge in the midst of his questions, to see what adventure the runner in the West is having. In his travels, he came to the land of the Picture Drawers, (Photography). While walking through their village, he asked the question, "To what uses can drawings be put to other than pictures of friends, or animals?"

Rippling Brook, (Vivian Shaw) the first person he asked said, "Why, I think that if our artists drew pictures of our medicine men, and men of learning, after they passed away, we would have proof such men really lived." One of the lesser chiefs named Half Moon, (Ernest Westman), because of his interest in the heavenly bodies, agreed with Rippling Brook, and also stated that drawings of moons and stars would help further the study of them.

Knows-All-Laws, (Erna Weber) claims that drawing could be used as evidence in trials of wrong-doers. And Warrior Long-Lance, (Howard Wiebenga) replied, "Drawings should be made of our wars and battles with the enemy, so that future generations will know of our heroes and their brave deeds." Squaw Strong-Body, (Mildred Klatka) would like to have the artists picture the games and all the sports in which the men and women of her tribe competed.

Little-Rock (Howard Hebbeling) wanted representations of all the activities and ceremonies in the village. Chief-Sitting-Bear, (O'Toole) agreed, and said that such drawings would be a good way to keep records of all that went on. Believes-In-The Hereafter, (Dominic Fortoria) answered, "I want pictures of my friends and relatives that passed on, so, I will have something to remember them by.

The rest of the answers to this question seemed unimportant, so Mishe Mokwa, the West Wind, will carry us in our search for the seeker of knowledge in the East. Over mountain and stream, desert and lake, until finally we are set down in the midst of the Mohawk nation. Here we see a great crowd of Indians sitting in a circle before a great roaring council fire, answering Chief Kutenas' courier's question. "What is the first home, or hunting (school) experience you remember vividly?"

Squaw Very-Bad-Cook, (Sophie Sofus) who was the first to answer, said, "I remember spilling a boiling pot of water on my arm." Another Squaw named Brave-Heart, (Marian Kozuhottz) complimented Very-Bad-Cook on her clumsiness, and also gave her an answer to the question, "I remember striking a boy over the head with a war club." (Text Book.)

One-Who-Came-From-Afar (Ruth Karewo) couldn't speak a word of Mohikan, (English) when she first came to this village, but the men and women of wisdom, (Teachers) taught her how to talk their language.

Stealer-of-Beets (Norman Haukenson) stated he had a very unpleasant memory of a bowl of beets falling on his head, when every one in the tepee was asleep.

Before we go back to tell Chief Kutenas the answers to his question, we shall go into the South to learn what fortune the runner there had. He had come to the village of the Savage Comanches. After learning who he was, and from where he had come, they treated him with honour and respect, for Chief Kutenas was much loved and respected among all tribes. After he had eaten and rested, he went about asking this question, "How do you feel when you are having your picture drawn?"

Girl-Who-Is-Not-Patient (Dorothy Shea) does not like to pose for a picture. She said it took too long to draw. Squaw-Who-Is-Too-Busy (Georgia Lee Lipke) sighed, and also said there was too much work to do to have her picture drawn. Swimming-Fish (Evelyn Vanderlee) is always wondering how her picture will turn out, and Diving-

 Become children of light, vigorous, active,

 Hasten clouds from the four quarters.
 Come snow in plenty, that water may be abun-

MY PAL, JOE

Have you ever been so lonely
 That you're heart is hanging low
 When you wish you had a pal
 That's as charming as my Joe?
 He can always make you happy
 He can make your burdens light
 His twinkling eyes make laughter
 His wagging tail makes things all right.
 By now, you surely know, my pal
 Is a puppy, gay and fine.
 And you also know your heart
 Wants a puppy just like mine.
 So when you're feeling forlorn
 And you've nothing else to do,
 Come o'er and play with Joe
 'Cause no other dog will do.
 There's only one in this sad world
 Who can ever be my beau
 Just the puppy for my heart
 Just that puppy—My pal, Joe.

PARTY PLEASURES

For an hour, now I have controlled myself, but can I go on much longer? Every human instinct in me is demanding that I surrender to that one consuming desire. A gleaming knife is lying beside me, taunting me to end all this. However, as I watch the gay party, I realize I cannot possibly do it yet, but the urge grows stronger and stronger with each passing moment. There is nothing left for me but this. As I look at the shining blade, nothing else exists. The great moment has come! I have made my decision! Trembling from head to foot, I pick up the knife, and fiercely plunge it right into the heart! There it lies, quivering in all its golden glory, that mouth-watering wedge of lemon pie, with the golden-toasted, white wave of meringue topping. What a pleasure indeed, even if I did sneak out to the table before hand!

ON BEING TALL

I wish that I were small. In fact, I know that I would be the happiest person alive if I were tiny. To be able to wear a size "2" shoe would be such a relief. To be able to look up at the world instead of down would be nothing short of heaven. Unfortunately for me I'm not small. I'm tall. Not too tall, perhaps, but too tall for my own liking.

Still, being tall does have its advantages. From my lofty height I never have trouble seeing over the heads during a Legion parade. My friends can never lose sight of me in a crowd; that is, of course, if they don't close their eyes or turn their backs. They don't very often.

I guess I should be happy and content with my lot. I have "just growed" this way, and that is all there is to it—Gee, how I wish I were small!

DREAM BUBBLES

Here, alone I sit,
With eyelids shut.
Alone I blow huge bubbles,
From an imaginary pipe,
Bubbles that hold the inmost feelings of
My being,
And carry me
High above this world.
Bubbles that hold my dreams,
My hopes,
My ambitions,
My desires.
Bubbles that fill me with various hues,
Both warm and cold.
Bubbles that float me out across lands
And seas—
Float me out on smooth wings of clouds.
Dream bubbles.
Will they burst?

WINTER FAIRYLAND

Still night, moonlight,
The scene is set.
Snow flakes falter
Onward bent.

Quietly, yet steadily,
Falling into drifts
They come, the flurries,
Sent us as gifts.

Moonbeams streaming
On the snow
As an angel
Casting her glow.

Still night, moonlight,
The snow does cease
And all we have—
A Fairyland of peace.

MY WAY TO BETTER GRADES

Almost everybody wishes to have better grades in his subjects; but, many of them do not realize that to have better grades, they must work for them.

It seems to me that I have seldom worried about my grades. I have always followed a simple rule; that is, learn each point as it is taught. When I begin a new chapter, or exercise, etc., I analyze it; learn the simple points first; then take more time to study the difficult ones. Another important thing, is to learn each point when it is taught. This will save many a headache afterwards. Another point included in the rule is to do one's homework promptly, regularly, and thoroughly. Many students say, "I haven't time to do it," or "Miss Brown gave us too much." This is the wrong attitude to take. Each one has time to do his homework, and one never receives too much. If one would do more and talk less, he would be much happier. Each person knows he should do his homework, that he should study, that school is a part of his everyday life. Why then doesn't he take life as he should? One knows he should balance his life. The best way to do this is to study and work regularly, so that everything won't pile up on him. In this way the day would be balanced. Make use of the study periods, finish your work immediately after school, and you will have more leisure time.

Why not make a resolution today to do your work always, regularly and well. You will be sure to enjoy life.

A RAINY DAY

To sit by the window on a rainy day
Is more than merely a thrill.
I love to watch the umbrellas bob
As umbrellas and raincoats will.

The array of colors thru the rain
Is a lovely light to see,
The glamour reflects on the window
And the window reflects on me.

Men with papers on their heads
To keep them from the wet
And you hear a mother call,
"Get out of the rain, my pet."

But soon it has all ceased,
And you see puddles everyway.
People are on the streets again,
And so ends another rainy day.

AN OUTING EXPERIENCE

It was a lovely day as it always is at the beginning of a family outing. The lunch was prepared, Susie's hair was curled for the occasion, Tommy's suspenders broke; all in all it was as previously stated, a lovely day. It was only a matter of hours until all agreed on a certain site to pitch the table cloth and proceed to unpack. I've always had a mania for being the first to do the job, and so with a song in my heart and an ant on my hand, I took the sandwiches from their hiding place. At this point, I wish to give a commercial for my mother whose deft hands had so capably packed our lunch and had so capably left the sandwiches bare of any filling. But we ate them and in the company of hot root beer; our summer afternoon snack was as ambrosia of the gods.

After our luncheon, we had a "jolly old game" of baseball. Oh, it was so delightful; we all came from the ring looking like last year's boutonnieres. The day would have been filled with laughter and song had it not been for my sweet little brother, who had made a bee-line for a green apple tree the minute we landed. Consequently he enjoyed the day least of all of us.

On the way home, my sister Susie insisted on having a Lone Ranger ice-cream cone, so Dad put on the brakes and bought her one. We all had a taste of it for Susie was nervous and kept climbing over all of us, each time she passed giving us a side swipe on the face with the cone.

We arrived home safely. Dad left his tire pump somewhere along the road, I left my "Gone With the Wind" under a spreading chestnut tree, and Tommy left a tie he had never liked hanging on the limb of a tree. It was a lovely day.

FRIENDS

Do we ever think of them,
Our friends long moved away?
How joyfully we played then,
But what about today?

Today we have new friends
And more will come tomorrow;
There are friends who share our every thought
And still others who share our sorrow.

There are friends who wait at each day's end,
And sometimes wait forever.
Those you really call a friend,
While others just think they're clever.

MOON MAGIC

A death-like silence reigns this night
O'er the hills and trees I love so well;
Not a cricket chirps, not a frog does sing,
Only the sorrowing chime of the steeple bell,
Penetrates the lonely night.
Then suddenly the belated culprit comes,
From behind some guilty cloud.
Her arms are filled with shining rays
Which she casts upon the ground, and her shining spirit
penetrates the lonely night.
The trees awaken, the hills resound with
The song of many frogs, the happy
Swish of some weary fish, the crickets cheery cry,
And the lasting chime of the steeple bell,
Penetrates the "Magic Night."

ANDREOTTI

Your sword is still unstained, Andreotti,
Still unstained; and still rules the Medici.
What is a sword meant for but to fight?
A sword well stained will be forever bright.
What is the motto then engraved upon the blade?
Your sire won it in Amalfi's bloody glade.
Oh, I say let freedom ever rule.
Then let your rapier be our liberty's first tool.
Tonight the Duke goes rambling through the town,
Shrouded well from curious eyes in his sable
gown,
Shrouded from the wrath of men and God.
If your sword needs baptism of blood
Who will set our city free?
Do you know, Andreotti?

The time had come. Big Chief Wants-to-Know-All sat up sturdily in the center of the lodge (the first floor foyer) and demanded from his Indian scouts the information for which he had sent them. Asked the chief, "You, Find-Out-by-Asking, have you succeeded in learning what inventions our friends most acclaim?"

The scout, bowing in respect, replied. "Oh, Great Chief, our tribesmen praise the gods of invention for the work they have made possible. Likes-to-Eat (John Alfant) acclaims greatly the vacuum can which preserves foods. Safety, the goddess of long life, receives all honor from our fellow tribesmen, the Practical-Minds. Works of this divinity which they praise are the iron lung—Gladys Freudenberg; pneumatic brakes—Ernest Black; hydraulic brakes—Harry Mosel; safety glass—Fred Piette; and traffic rule improvements—Grace Thomas.

"I've learned of many who acclaim those mysterious forces known as electricity and ether waves. Raymond Bankowski, Nora Semenzin, Gene Hulsey, Florence Wisniewska, Tom Keyashian, and Ruth Fischer all told me that they consider improvements in lamps and the uses of electricity very notable recently. Radio is THE modern invention according to Susan Pape, Dorothy Palmo, Betty Scott, Loretta Sobczyk, Irene Pochron, and Chalice Norman.

"Modern-Fashion—(Marilynn Melillo) appreciates the novel way of making cloth out of milk, and Common-Name (Frank Jones) agrees."

"Well done, my good servant, commended the chief, and Find-O-W-Can stepped forth to tell the results of his investigations.

"I am pleased to report, O Chief, that my search has been successful. Many were pleased to answer my inquiries as to how they rank athletics in reservation (high school) life. Anxious Player (Joseph Bachta) tells of his intentions to join our baseball team. Julietta Mantia praises the work of our football braves. Frank Zioncheck, Richard Maurer, and Lorayne Ruswick rank them very high, but Gladys McDaniels only ranks them third. Me thinks an investigation is necessary in that last case.

"I continued by asking the people how they think sports develop better camp (school) spirit. James Mix, Silvio Pasquarella, Irene Smith, Carolyn Den Besten, Anthony Bolach, Alex Kosznt, and Donald Joppek of our neighbors, the Clear-Consciences are all sure that athletics help teach the fundamentals of fair play and provide for a clean type of living. Dorothy Pastern and Ralph Benton agree that sports help to make participants better acquainted. 'Muscular activities pep up one,' said Mary Kapin, Fay Levine, George Hansen, and James Norgard. Dorothy Pastor says that every one is interested more in sports than in school spirit, but I convinced the young maiden that the two go hand in hand. Josephine Van Dun and Dorothy Wolfenden realize that sports make one strong and healthy, and if one is in that condition, he can think better. William Wright agreed, saying that a good swim made him feel alert for classes. Dorothy Carlson tells me that sports help one to like his reservation better. Restful (Glenn Werner) claims that sports give one time to relax, and The-Reasoner (Alvin Kransky) related that one wants to go to school because of the sports, and while one is there, he might as well do his best. That was a clever way to put it.

"And so, I end my revelations. I hope they are of satisfaction," said the second scout, and he too received the Chief's approval.

Lastly stood up Would-Like-to-Know with a placid expression on his rugged face. The chief knew by this that he had sent the right man to learn what peoples' main objectives are in coming to school.

He began, "I was fortunate in finding a squaw who is expressive of her whole clan. Helen Rasinkas said, 'One goes to school to absorb some of the knowledge of the present so that one can better understand facts in the future as they become known.' Squaw Helen Skomorska comes here mainly to learn English. Brave Robert Mager believes that one attends school to learn to listen and become a lady or gentleman. Helen Burdiak attends such an institution to learn to work, and Vincent Orlowski desires to learn how to study before completing his four years here. Joseph Meier, Adeline Weglaiz, Edward Wisniewski, and Macina Novak are learning in order to become successful. Materialistic (Della Fager) works like a slave for a piece of paper with some letters on it.

"Strangely enough, I found some people who have objections rather than objectives in coming here. Christine Sunzere doesn't like to climb stairs. Her friend Wants-to-Ride (Delores Slaviero) objects to walking to school. Florence Pittacora doesn't like the idea of having too much homework at one time and not enough at others. Howard Levine complains of having too much "unfinished business" to occupy his evening hours. "Sleepy-Head" (Margaret Kohl) dislikes having to get up in the morning, and Almost-Tardy (Margie Mulford) finds it hard to get here by first period. Near sunset Vilma Stomp and George Landahl particularly object to the tenth period. Clock-Watcher (Louise Messer) can't stand those long periods. Assembly days must be happy hunting ground to her."

The scout completed his report and left the chief in the midst of his meditation on the variety of ideas which fill the heads of Fenger Freshmen.

BURNSIDE

THE FORT DEARBORN MASSACRE

About in 1812, word was sent to Washington, D. C., that Fort Dearborn was not needed. So Washington sent word to the commander of the fort to vacate it and go to Detroit.

The commander knew that when he left the fort, the Indians would rush in and kill all the settlers. The soldiers tried to stop him from vacating, but he said orders are orders, and they had to go.

One day the soldiers and settlers started toward Detroit. They hadn't gone very far when a whole tribe of Indians swooped down on them. They started killing and wounding the white people. But a few were saved by a friendly Indian named Black Partridge.

When Washington got word of the massacre, it quickly sent troops again to watch and aid the other settlers who came. This proved to the other people that the Indians of Chicago were not friendly.

MY PAL JOE

I have a little friend
 His real name I don't know
 All you have to do is bend
 To touch my pal named Joe.
 He is just a little dog
 His hair is very grey
 I found him near a big log
 One fine summer day.
 He knows who his best friend is
 I feed him every day
 He is always by my side
 And never runs away.
 He knows how to guard me well.
 There was a man inside
 The dog ran in and grabbed his leg
 And Oh! How the man cried!
 I took him for a walk one day
 He ran out in the street
 He crossed the street half-way
 And was trampled by horse's feet.
 That was the last of the dog
 That I had had so long.
 His very last and painful cries
 Were such a sorry song.

THE APACHES

One of the famous American Indian chiefs was Geronimo, of the fierce Apaches. The Apaches, maddened by the coming of the whites to the West, raided place after place. They would sack a town, kill all the men, women and children, and then scalp them when dead, or even when alive. The Apaches, under the leadership of Geronimo, would stop stage coaches, military outposts, and also other towns. A few years later the Apaches surrendered to the whites and were given a reservation in Arizona, where Geronimo died.

Sam Houston's father was Major Houston. He was to transport his family to Tennessee but was taken ill and died. Sam was now a boy of thirteen. He spent most of his time with the Indians. Ol-loo-to-ka, one of the braves, made Sam his son. Later he fought in the War against England under General Jackson, who was in command of the American Army. Sam married, but unhappily, as he and his wife separated. Sam tried to become governor, but did not make it, but his old general, Jackson, became president. Then Sam went to live with the Indians. The Raven, as he was called by the Indians, kept the United States from going to fight the Indians. Texas was going to try to get its freedom when Mexico got its new president. But Santa Anna sent an army to kill anyone who resisted. Sam Houston was made Commander-in-chief of the Texas Army. Houston gave an order to Travis to blow up the Alamo and fall back to join Houston's men. But Travis held the fort for ten days, and then all were killed but one woman and her child. Later Sam Houston defeated Santa Anna, and Texas was free. Again Sam married. His son Sam, following his father's profession when he grew up, went to fight with the Confederate Army in the Civil War, and was killed in battle. Sam died at the age of seventy—a great loss to the Indians and his country.

BRIGHT BITS FROM BURNSIDE

The Indian youth of yester-year did not attend schools such as we do today. He stayed around the camp until he reached the age of seven or eight. Then he was put under the supervision of some chief or warrior who taught him the art of warfare. With our modern system of teaching, the youth of today has many leisure moments in which to do outside work. At Burnside, the Branchites present a picture of varied employment. Ralph Perrotta indulges in the manly art of wood chopping, and Eileen Granes finds being a waitress is not the hardest job to do. Richard Chiuzels is the lad at the Herald American branch office, who's duty it is to see that Richard St. Pierre and Joe Terkesk make their deliveries and collections. The latter claims that the job of collecting is "plenty tough." Genevieve Jamioz and Helen Richel share the honored title of being called "Junior Housewives," because of their ability to do housework. Rose Fisher checks boxes in a dry goods store while Andrew Schneider claims he has plenty of working setting up pins in a bowling alley.

Several Branchites were asked their pet sayings to which they answered: Frances Turlo "Heavens sakes"; Bill Bonshire "Holy sailors" or "Hey, Doc"; Marcus Jorgensen "Holy smokes"; Don Neker "Well, well, imagine that"; Herbert Smith "Tell it to the Marines"; Thomas Shanohon's "I ain't got my lesson"; Irene Szajovics "Gee."

"Use Minute Rub. It's good for what ails you" or "Eat Wheaties, The Breakfast of Champions." You've all heard announcers blat out some sort of advertisement of this sort when listening to the radio. When asked of their reaction to such announcements the Branchites replied: Bob Bonshire, "I know I've got the wrong station"; Louis Chicamps, "The advertisements on the radio are so long that when the program comes on, it lasts about ten minutes because twenty minutes of the half hour program is advertising"; Lorraine Basso, "I wonder what would happen to me if I tried all the things they talk about"; Elizabeth Stark claims she feels like throwing something at the radio when a program of that sort comes on the air. Elda Amendola, Junior Maxwell, Melvin McElvain, Dorothy Henkosky, George Caruso, Loretta Farley, Barbara De Vine, Clyde Perry, Mattie Preston, Gladys Taylor, Geraldine Johnson, Greda Kebler, Jesse McCracklin, Steve Mesko, Patricia Millwood, Mike Studko, Audrey Tucker, Clarence Swan, Bessie Pacz, Helen Duggan, and Florence Fillippo: "talk, talk, and more talk." Olga Yanke-wich, Alexander Albertine, Ralph Carson, Leo Hagan, Genevieve Jannoz, Bob Johnson,, Valerie Kowaliski, Mildred Tise, Jessie Takota, Andrew

Lutheran, Alice Nelson, Victor Ryon, James Ryan, Rick Ryan, Mary Subo, Earl Sinis, Herb Smith, Joe Sonidi, Margaret Sukko, Dorothy Wunder, Ray Kohl, Dick Kroc, Norma Martin, Esther Alah, and Peter Frangella: "Don't they ever get tired of saying the same thing over and over again?" Ann La Rue, Walter Banks, Joe Shaw and Al Barnak claim that it's "all just one big lie"; Genevieve Moran, Gizella Regula, Frances Turlo, Beulah Allen, Joe Barich, Jesse Barnes, Marjorie Boras, Dick Thuizel, Carmen Foresti, Ramon Gieson, Jeanette Mielnek, Emanuel Moralis, Doris Nelson, Dorothy Nigg, Susan Stumper, Marion Verpler, Luella Webster, Mary Zaklar, Elda Amendola, Ted Babrak, Gene Baker, Lorraine Basso, Elizabeth Binter, Elizabeth Brooks, Ruth Burk, and Louis Chiampo all stated they didn't believe in them unless their doctors recommended the product advertised; Nick Benton, Roy Baker, Gene Barish, Dan Bobel, Bob Coleman, Robert Cook, Bill Feges, Don Grod, Fred Gyure, Roy Havard, Edward Krutis, Jack McGraw, John O'Brien, William Doya, Rudy Sakol, Andy Schneider, Al Sera, Joe Shaw, Roy Wieggle, Walter Zavistowski, Bette Babroky, Walter Banks, Al Barmak, Anthony Bova, Egidio De Fillipo, Mary Foges, Angeline Formosa, Marito Gubson, James Handibodi, John Honchell, Norma Johnston, Ann La Rue, Catherine La Rue, and Mildred Mikalko suffer no reaction at all because they say, "The public is just being bluffed by a lot of false claims."

But if we had interviewed some Indians on these same questions, their replies would probably have been, "Ugh! Ugh!" for their pet sayings. Then the one about work would be answered, "Me no lazy. Me work all the time." Then last, if the radio program question were asked of them, their reply would probably be something like, "Ugh, what him this radio?"

CHIEF RAIN-IN-THE-FACE

Probably one of the most noted chiefs among the Sioux Indians is Rain-in-the-Face. He was born near the banks of the Cheyenne River in the year of 1835. Neither his father nor his grandfather was a chief. He got his name when he was about ten years old. One day he got into a fight with a Cheyenne Indian boy, older than he. He got the best of the fight, but was hit in the face several times, and his face was streaked with blood. After this, and for the rest of his life, he was called Rain-in-the-Face. He died on September 14, 1905, when he was seventy years old.

INDIAN BEADS

You've often admired old Indian beads
 Of beans and seeds and shells;
 They may have been some great chief's prize,
 Or intoned the witch doctor's spells.

Each token we find on a beautiful string
 Might tell the great deeds of the tribe.

In fact, we might find a hist'ry complete,
 If only the beads were alive.
 So when you go brousing for old Indian lore
 In forests, on mountains, on dells;
 Revere the story of primitive life;
 In beans and seeds and shells.

THE AMERICAN INDIAN

Indians lived in our land long ago,
So many things of them do we know.
They hunted and fished for food in the wood,
They roamed and wandered wherever they could.

Their little tent homes were called tepees
And nestled by towering trees.
From skins of wild animals, they were made,
And on tall, thin poles the skins were laid.

The Indian may have liked his small home,
And on the wide prairie for to roam,
But for myself, here is all I can say:
I'm glad I am living now—today.

Barbara Bruggemann, Curtis—IA

INDIANS

No one knows where the Indian has come from on this continent, or how long he has lived here. At first people thought that the Indians were descendants of the Hebrews, or of shipwrecked Europeans. This theory was proved impossible, however, for the Indian language is entirely different from any other in the world. Most scientists believe that they come from the tribes of Central and Northeastern Asia, and they crossed over to America from Asia at Behring Strait.

Like all primitive races, the Indians were fond of their personal appearance. On festive and other occasions they painted their face and body. In most tribes necklaces, shells, earrings, and sometimes lip and nose jewelry were worn. The main clothing for men and women in most tribes was shirts and leggings of deerskin. The tribes of the Southwest wove cotton garments and made robes of painted rabbit, before the arrival of the white people. Blankets or robes were worn everywhere for warmth or for dignity. Some of the patterns made by the Indians were very beautiful.

It is said that nearly two hundred languages and fifteen hundred dialects are known to have been spoken by the Indians. Other languages may have perished when certain tribes were killed in wars. The Cherokees invented an alphabet in 1821, but the Mayos and the Aztecs are the only tribes who ever had a system of writing. Most of the Indians communicated with each other by means of signs and by moving their hands. They highly developed the sign language.

The Indians are often thought of as being very primitive, which is partly true. However, some things they did were as great as deeds done by the people today. They practiced irrigation in the West and were able to grow many crops. They did not just fish, hunt, and fight. They grew many crops which we raise today. Some of these were corn, tobacco, beans, squashes, pumpkins, sweet potatoes, peanuts, gourds, and cotton.

They had some of the sports and amusements which we have today. The boys and girls often played ball. The men and women often gambled.

The number of Indians has been decreasing in the United States during the past hundred years, but is gradually increasing now. In 1922 there were 340,917 full bloods in the United States.

THE HERALD OF SPRING

A chirp I hear from a tall oak tree,
 A robin singing with greatest glee,
 He sings a message loud and clear,
 "Cheer up, cheer up, for spring is here."

Hear him, hear him, he is nigh,
 Sweetly singing in the sky,
 Listen, listen, let him sing,
 Robin Redbreast, "Herald of Spring."

THE AMERICAN INDIAN

Hair so coarse and black as night,
A tall and stalwart man of might,
Skin of copper, tanned by sun,
'Tis the American Indian.
Hunting berries in the wood,
Is how he earned his livelihood,

Trapping, and fishing in the streams,
Was another way of gaining means.
Living beneath sun and star,
His home was scattered near and far,
A real true American,
Our first citizen—the Indian.

CUTE CRACKS FROM CURTIS

A strong body and a keen mind are the goals set by young Indian braves and maidens. Many Curtisites too have set similar goals in scholarship and athletics, which they hope to achieve.

Betty Allen seems to be having a hard time making the honor club; but never fear, like a true warrior, she has not given up hope. Betty Parleton intends to maintain a straight "E" average, but Bob McClintock has set his goal in the athletic field and would like someday to become Fenger's top ranking wrestler. To be a member of the Phorex is the ambition of Edmund Reedy, Barbara Bruggemann and Bob Hoffman, while Adam Munz and Robert Carlson have set their eyes on becoming members of the swimming and football teams; but the thought of becoming letter girls makes Rita Spies and Eleanor Moore, oh, so happy. Patricia Hills hopes to graduate in the upper third of her class and then go on to Normal College; and graduating with tri-honors is the aim of Gertrude Noreen.

Leisure moments around the Indian camp are not wasted by any members of the tribe. Like them, many Branchites have novel and interesting ways of whiling away their spare time.

Y.M.C.A. activities take up all of Carole Bauman's free time, while Bill Perry would rather go horseback riding. The study of the microscope has proven to be a very interesting pastime for John Brazinskas; but Alex Napoli indulges in the manly art of carrying out ashes. Salt sprays of the ocean seems to have Donald Meyering under their influence, for he spends his time building model boats.

Music has many interested followers. The accordion takes up all of Harry Spadonie's time. Collecting songs both old and new proves to be a very interesting past time for Clara De Haas, but Harvey Stanton seems to think that playing and saving phonograph records just can't "be beat" as a leisure time activity.

There are also some who do creative work. Bob Knoevig spends his time in his home woodshop making useful articles in furniture, while Edward Waychuse utilizes his time at a printing press. Others have novel ways of whiling away their time. Taking her younger brother out walking keeps Emily Patras completely busy, while Margaret Rogers would rather sit down and try to figure out a jig-saw puzzle. Photography and the collecting of old coins and arrow heads seems to interest Burton Cox and Chester Pukalski, but Marion Dregar is interested in collecting 1939 pennies. Ruth Murphy enjoys collecting stamps and designing clothes. Many a Curtisite has hopes of becoming a second Glen Cunningham or Pavo Nurmi; they include Les Line, Arthur Goreham, John Euriette, Bill Freger, and Robert Hrometz. These boys and others have hopes for reorganizing the Fenger track team. There are others who would like to organize a tumbling team at the main building, upon entering. They are Bruno Lucchini, James Madderom, Stephen Svitok, Charles Thomason, John Brazinskas, and Richard Lucas. Roger Bushee, present head of the Curtis Student Council, has hopes of duplicating this feat at the main on a larger scale by then becoming president. To be members of the Senior or Social Orchestra are the ambitions of Gust Karidis, Regina Chiaro, Rose Mary Ramirez, Ara Pridjian, Vernon Sidler, and Margie Besler; Bob Schrader, Ray Appel, Mary Limback, Charlotte Lanti, Virginia Crummie, Bill Skinner and Helen Dremon have hopes of some day coming under the direction of Capt. Wm. Burnham. The thought of becoming members of the Fenger News or Courier Staffs gives Bill Klyn, Isabel Lahola, Shirley Tanis, Irene Przyborowski, Bill Perrie and Edna Vanderlinden something to look forward to. Up and coming assistants of Miss Fluke will be Rita Spies, Isabel Rudy, and Dorothy Jacobs; while Jean Rimovsky, Eleanor Cravens, Viola Raguso, and Yolanda Rosso are determined to see that the office duties are not neglected. Many Curtisites enjoy the healthful recreation of bicycle riding. These fans include Jean Whyte, Mary Paul, Joe Rago, Ruth Pederson, Mary Ann Skoglund, Oral Wanes, and Robert Hoffman; but it seems that George Gustafson, Bob Adduci, Aurora Bendinelli, Anne Billick, Patricia Hills, and Bert Zanon would rather spend their time in a movie theater; and a quiet day at home listening to the radio, is just the thing for Lucille Maravado, Jack Miller, Elvira Timman, Shirley Harwig, Jack Johnson, Kathleen Karl, and Bruno Canalo. Those following what can probably be classed as the most unusual way of spending leisure time are Elsie Magantal, Jack Nelson, Shirley Nordhoff, Gwendolyn Ostrowski, Betty Giroux, Evelyn Gryczewski, and Edna Boedeker. Believe it or not, they spend their time doing homework.

The body of the Indian is an example of physical perfections. Their arts and handicrafts show that they were highly developed mentally. They usually accomplished what they set out to do. So with all the modern conveniences and facilities of this day, there is no reason these Curtisites should not reach their goals.

LUNCHROOMS

It's only fifth period and I'm starved;
Waiting for seventh is awfully hard.
I wonder if Mickey will give me some candy,
And if she does it will be just dandy.
Now it's sixth and I'm almost dying;
If I wait much longer I'll start crying.
Only one more period to go
And I'm so hungry, I'm sure you know.
Hurray, it's seventh, but first to division,
To sit there and wait for the teacher's decision.
"Class dismissed," replies the teacher,
"Gosh," yell the pupils, "she's just like a preacher."
Into the lunchroom they all hurry,
And begin to eat with the least bit of worry.
All of a sudden a muddle of noise;
As you expected, of course, it's the boys.
Gosh! I'm hungry, but I don't feel like eating,
We girls have to take an awful beating.
All of a sudden the principal walks in,
And all the boys sit there with a grin.
The principal leaves and it's noisy again,
It makes me as angry just to listen to them
My head is going round and everything in a muddle,
Then my head goes into a huddle.
Now, what shall we do about this noise,
We'll have to do something to those noisy boys.
"Hurrah! an idea," shouts Peggy with joy,
"Let's go where there isn't a single boy."

A DAY AT THE BEACH

One mid-summer's morn bright and early, my brother and I rose with a spring that would have put "Tarzan" to shame and made a mad rush for the bathroom. Breakfast, it seemed, tasted extra delicious. Why? Because we were going to the beach for the whole day.

My brother Don and I helped our mother the best we could because it was the first time for us at the beach that summer. I guess we were more bother than help as my mother told us to sit down and stay down.

Finally the moment was at hand! We hauled the shopping bags loaded with sandwiches and picnic preparations. My brother, the boy next door, (in whose family auto we were going), and I, helped load it into the trunk; and a minute later
we were off!

The ride seemed exceedingly long; that, no doubt, was caused by happiness resulting from one getting what he or she has wanted for some time. The green masses, with brown tassles told us we reached our destination, Marquette Park, Marquette, Indiana.

FIGHTING IT OUT

In this corner we have an eight by twelve rug, and in that corner we have a strong, husky lad. The bell rings; the lad approaches the fierce, dirty-looking rug. A "bang" is heard; the rug staggers back as though stunned by the blow, but out comes a cloud of thick dust. The boy is blinded and choking but only for a minute. Again he approaches the rug. Bang, bang, bang is heard. The rug has lost; it can protect itself no longer for the dust is gone. Then a cry, "Mother I'm finished beating the rug. I won, I won!" The mother inquires what her son meant by saying he won? He answered, "Well, Mother, you see, I make a game out of my cleaning up, and this makes clean-up-week much more fun."

If asked the question, "Do you think a boy should follow his Father's trade?", the Indians would have answered without any "ands" or "buts." Indians, without debate, follow their father's trade, and if there were any objectors, these recalcitrant braves were put into the forests to live or die. Thus, the Indians gladly carry on their father's, grandfather's and great-grandfather's skills.

How differently are the Mt. Vernon pupils' reply to that same question!

Tom Ferinstein, Ardelle Wigner, Laurita Hoekstra, Egbert Bolhuis, Mary Guzzardo, Bernice Galpantas, Jeanette Urquhart: "If the boy likes the trade of his father, he should follow it."

Joe Wilkus: "The boy should be able to do the kind of work he wants to do."

Harry Jacobs: "If the boy likes the trade of his father, he certainly should follow it."

Richard Wood: "If each boy was to follow his grandfather's and ancestors' trade, the world would thus be fashioned, and no one would follow the new and modern trades."

Carol Larson: "I believe that the father's trade is usually good to follow because of the assistance the father may give to the boy."

Ruth Greek: "No, the boy's ability might be entirely different from that of his father's."

George Verkinder: "If the father holds a job that is not so good, the boy should prepare in some other trade."

Victor Ziekis: "The boy should be allowed to make his own choice, because it is his own life at stake, for he might not like his father's occupation."

Thus in a question of this sort we found that the Indians and this group of pupils differ in their answers and opinions as above. This is mostly due to the progression since the time of "The True American" and our times.

Jean Smith: "I've already got a good impression of high school life and I'm very pleased with it."

Bob Christensen: "Yes, I was disappointed because it was very confusing for I couldn't get used to the bells."

Arlyne Van Drent: "Yes, don't like the idea of three-in-a-locker."

Wesley Wilner: "I wish there was dancing."

Wilma Stokes: "Sure disappointed because the periods go so slowly except when lunch comes, and that period really flies."

Gloria Helps: "I couldn't get used to that 8 o'clock in the morning business."

Then still another group was asked, "Do you follow the life of any well-known personality, such as a movie-star, athlete, band leader? The responses were varied. For, while Eliane Bump likes the life of Judy Garland, Dolores Moleer likes the life of her mother.

Leslie Sparrey: "Leslie Sparrey, Sr."

Bob Adler: "Like to follow the life of the young but great Don Griffin."

DAY DREAMING

I dream of places I'd like to see,
Of people that I'd like to be,
I see myself in a flowing gown,
And upon my head there sits a crown.
The doorbell rings, I jump with a start;
My visions are broken, and so is my heart;

"Sorry," I say, "no vegetables today,"
But that's not all I'd like to say.
I sink back into my easy chair,
And into space, I sit and glare;
I think of things I planned to do;
With day dreaming sadly I'm through.

OUR AMERICAN INDIANS

Although we people living in this day and age think some European rulers are cruel and heartless when they step into some small defendless country, we must look back and see what some of our ancestors did to the Indians who lived in this wonderful land long before white men knew it existed.

Our earliest settlers managed to make friends with these so-called savages and were able to buy the land from the Indians for a few kegs of rum and some worthless old beads. Naturally the Indians knew no better and thought they were only letting the white men rent the ground to hunt on the same as they had done.

As immigration increased the farther west the Indians were pushed. The Indians knew by this time that the Pale Face, the name Indians knew the white men by, were trying to get their hunting ground and kill all their animals.

Many heartless battles took place between the white people and the Indians. The Indians were, of course, fighting for what really belonged to them while the white men were fighting to get more land and to immigrate farther west. While pioneers and the first settlers in the West were on their way most of these gruesome battles took place. The fighting odds were always about three whites to every six Indians. The Indians' method of killing these people was horrifying and heartless for they used a little hatchet and took the scalps off. During the Revolutionary War the British Army paid the Indians for bringing White Men's scalps to the trading posts. These things went on for many years.

Though today our Indians are now peaceful, (we still see the Indians being transferred from one reservation to another), many are making very worthwhile citizens in our fair land. Some own rich oil fields in the West, and these tribes are making very large incomes. Still others are educating their people to the best of their ability. The American Indian, in my estimation, could be one of our most favorable United States citizens.

WILD FOLKS SHOW US UP

A robin red, a bluebird blue,
I saw from bedroom window,
They looked at me and seemed to say,
"Clean-up, clean-up, this lovely day."
A gray-brown squirrel looked out at them
From its nest in tall oak tree,
He got a brush and said, "Chee, Chee;"
Then cleaned-up merrily.

A rabbit furry looked at the flurry,
Of workers cleaning-up.
He went to work like a terrible Turk
And cleaned-up 'stead of being a shiek.
The moral of this, dear readers all,
(I'm sure you see it.)
If wild folk clean-up without a grunt,
Why can't we clean-up from back to front?

MY WAY TO BETTER GRADES

When I first thought of attending high school, I began to think of my older sister's work, which to me, looked very hard. I began to be afraid that I would not be able to do the work, so I decided always to listen to everything the teacher told us and always to do my homework.

The first few weeks I never spoke to any of my classmates while in class for fear the teacher would lower my mark.

When I received my course book, I found all my marks were high, so I guess the best way to get good marks is to be afraid that you will fail.

AT RIVERVIEW PARK

A roaring and a clanging greeted us as we walked into the park. Screams of fright filled the air as the bobs flew down the hill; men, begging the public to buy, shouted the price of their rides.

Our first ride was called the Blue Streak; and as we went up the hill, it seemed that everyone had diminished in size down below. Down the hill we tore at a terrific speed, our heads went back and forth; then another climb and a still deeper downward journey. With a gasp we got off the cars and went in search of another thrilling ride. In Aladin's castle we walked through a rolling barrel, slid down a flight of rollers and bumped into seemingly solid walls.

After lunch we went on the Greyhound. Time after time we took this same ride; although it wasn't quite as thrilling, it was restful. Each time we battled for a front seat, and later we found to our dismay the back was far better; At about four in the afternoon we rode in a round car in which as many children as possible were squeezed. This ride was called, "The Blue Ribbon," back and forth we were jolted; then around a turn and we were jostled out into the waiting crowd. Soon the noise of the afternoon died down, and some of the rides had stopped. Reluctantly we walked to the street car with an adventurous afternoon to remain as a memory.

TALENT REVUE—THE GRAND FINALE

*In all youthful sports and pastimes
In all manly acts and labors
Swift of foot was Hiawatha*

ATHLETICS

"WITH THE SPORTSMEN"

The Indian boy was a prince of the wilderness. He believed in physical perfection attainable through feats of hunting, chase, and sport. All of these were of a strenuous nature, which accounted for his hardiness and perfection of limb.

"Skilled was he in sports and pastimes;
In the merry dance of snowshoes,
In the play of quoits and ball play;
Skilled was he in games of hazard,
In all games of skill and hazard."

Song of Hiawatha—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

Embodied today in American sports and games is the same fundamental ideal of personal health in which the Indian had faith. Our present day public school system of athletics is an example of this.

Boys Athletic Association

Since only a relatively small number of boys in a large school are able to participate in the main inter-scholastic sports events of the season, an organization such as the B.A.A. affords an excellent opportunity to the remaining number of boys in the student body to participate in all games and events it stages. Under the guidance of Mr. Young, softball, volleyball, basketball, and touch-football games are held with the various division room teams pitted against one another. All these events are enjoyed and all are looked forward to by the boys.

Wrestling

Two of the Red and Green's matmen, under the coaching of Mr. Palmer, entered the city-wide wrestling meet and emerged victorious. These boys are John D'Angelo, who captured second place in the ninety-five pound division, and Gene Pederson, who became master of the one hundred seventy-five pound class by defeating all comers for first place. Of these two, only D'Angelo is eligible for next season's team.

Basketball

The Junior basketball team, led by Captain Victor Verkinder, fought its way through a tough schedule to close the season with a final count of four wins and four losses. Hard playing on the part of such boys as R. Brown, P. Pena, J. Boand, M. Mullen, E. Dobrinski, A. Karas, and H. Richel helped the team reach the point achieved. The graduation of G. Buckley in February was a decided blow to the team. Had he been in there, the team would have finished much higher in standing. The outlook for next year is very promising because of the return of 6 lettermen and the following reserve members: D. Massoglia, R. Ulrich, R. Costalunga, C. Mulka, and C. Slager. V. Verkinder and M. Mullen are the only team members graduating in June.

Our Senior team had a greater amount of success than any previous senior quintet had at Fenger for the past five years. This season, though attaining but three wins and five losses, they have been looked upon more as a challenger than as a mere contender, because many of their losses were by slight margins. Captain E. Schubert, A. Marsch, E. Superits, J. Lyon and R. Kwoka, will not be with us next year, but with players like J. Kuzmanik, W. Crummie, A. Crummie, J. McClintock, B. Rayhill, and M. Radtke, returning in September, our prospects for a still better showing can be looked forward to.

Tennis

This season's squad of "racketeers" representing Fenger are, as previous teams have been, under the coaching of Mr. Walter Sampson. This season sees the return of such veterans as Bergstrom, Cuzner, and Howes, each of whom was in competition last year. The final team is composed of two singles, a double, and a few substitutes. Tennis may not require the brawn of football and heavyweight wrestling, but it does combine the speed and stamina of basketball with the muscular co-ordination of swimming and the alertness of baseball. It is an ideal sport for any athletically inclined boy or girl.

Swimming

While Fenger's swimmers have set no records this past season, the year has seen the developing and improving of all the mermen, thus making the solution to the puzzle of next year's team clearer and brighter. Mr. Knight has great hopes for all the boys, some of whom are Hines, Zilis, Purdy, Krieg, and Smith. With the return of boys such as these, plus new material, the next Fenger Fleet should literally "sweep the seas."

Baseball

The baseball team of 1940, with returning lettermen like Captain H. Richel, L. Pelz, J. Kredens, R. Kwoka, and T. Chud, give cause to look forward to a successful season. With J. Genis, W. Wallis, D. Griffin, and H. Stevenson, of football fame filling the gaps left through graduation last year, our team was further strengthened. Members of last year's sophomore baseball team—E. Dreger, G. Carli, R. Brown, E. Dobiniski, and the Crummie brothers, have made the competition for positions on this year's team very keen. What is known as a home and home schedule was played with the following teams in this order—Hirsch, Calumet, Hyde Park, Harper, Morgan Park, Bowen, and lastly Parker. The boys are under the supervision of Mr. Dixon.

coaching the fellows and adding up their scores. The boys not only receive bowling shirts, but also there are a number of prizes given each year, at a large banquet held at the Stevens Hotel, to outstanding bowlers. So drop around some Friday and watch this fascinating sport.

D'Angelo will be able to wrestle under Fenger's colors next season but Pederson will not be qualified.

The swimming team was not photographed in time enough to allow identification. The team is shown here in a full group and all the swimmers are present. They are under Mr. Knight's direction and have shown great possibilities.

The Baseball team is enjoying a very successful season. It is perhaps the strongest team Fenger has produced in many years. Mr. "Dimmy" Dixon is coach.

G.A.A.

Like the Indian Maidens who enjoyed many colorful social affairs, the girls of the G.A.A. held delightful social functions—a St. Patrick's Dance, a Baby Doll Party, and a Leap Year Dance which were immensely enjoyed by the attending G.A.A. members. These dances were arranged by the G.A.A. officers, Jennie Fanizzo, president; Lois Reimann, treasurer; and Connie Lucas, secretary; under the guidance of Miss Kathryn Bulger, sponsor of the G.A.A. With the persistence of the G.A.A. representatives, the membership drive nearly reached one hundred per cent. Appreciation is extended to Miss Bulger, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Kitzmiller, Miss Gardener, and Mrs. Maurer for the advice and enthusiasm they have shown this organization of athletic-minded girls.

LETTER GIRLS

Led by Madge Vander Mey, the Letter Girls added housework to their curriculum this semester. Having completed the transformation of the drab health room into a cheery and colorful club room, the girls must now keep it neat and clean by frequently flirting the broom and feather duster. The Selby family graciously presented a plaque marking the dedication of this room to Mrs. Jessie Anderson.

The Indian devoted most of his life to the out-of-doors and proved to be very healthy. Possibly in unconscious copying of the Indian, the Letters Girls held roller skating parties, weenie roasts, and hikes to maintain their healthy bodies. This semester the girls were under the excellent leadership of Miss Katherine Bulger.

The need of architecture, we must realize, is great. Not only does it make homes a safe and suitable place to live in, but it adds beauty to everything one is inspired to look at. Any person interested in architecture has no difficulty in admiring both phases of it, the past and the present.

JUNIOR CITIZEN

Two good friends had Hiawatha,
Singled from all the other,
Bound to whom he gave the right hand
Of his heart, in joy, and sorrow.

Song of Hiawatha—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

The Indian tribes from the north, south, east, and west came to one great meeting place and there held ceremonies and dances, making friends with their fellow men. In Fenger we have accomplished the purpose of this old Indian custom through the Junior Citizens' Club.

This club affords an opportunity for the students to become greater friends with their fellow students. It has become a tradition at Fenger to be a member of the Junior Citizens and enjoy the student social life it offers under the sponsorship of genial Mr. Heber Hays.

JUNIOR CITIZENS

PIANO CLUB

Although the music rendered by the Piano Club never sounds anything like an Indian war-dance, they do have their moods. The purpose of the club is to adhere to the musical feeling and taste of every member so classical numbers are also exquisitely rendered and each and every member tries his best to transmit his appreciation and interpretation of the works of the great composers. The club also enables members to produce duets which insures a delightful past-time for all. Anyone knowing how to play the piano will find himself quite at home in this group. Mrs. Ojala is the club's present sponsor.

Nancy Lee Tucker—4A

ASTRONOMY CLUB

Seven little Indian boys, who used to dance every night around one of their singing friends, were forbidden to have a big feast. That night as they danced to forget their sadness, they flew up in the sky and became the seven stars forming the dipper. Though we do not believe the legends, we still have an interest in stars. Mr. Mumford's astronomy club offers a fine opportunity for young astronomers. Presiding over the group are President Lucien Stryck and Secretary Dolores Frank. Interesting topics such as the shape and motion of planets and sun spots are discussed.

Dorothy Burgess—4A

STAMP CLUB

Here we have one of the oldest and most active clubs of Fenger. This semester's Stamp Club has twenty wide awake stamp enthusiasts with Walter Andrews as president. The old familiar question "Any stamps to trade" may be heard from this lively group any time after ninth period in 131.

During the days of the Indians, signs were used as identification, while now we have this group showing their exhibits in the Lions Club Hobby Show. Members wishing to obtain letters must be members for four consecutive semesters. Mr. Smitter, a faculty stamp collector, is the sponsor.

Marcella Madderom—4A

THE AVIATION CLUB

Today few eagles cast their shadows across the hunting grounds of the American Indians. High powered, metal birds have taken their place and fill the air with a deafening drone.

To keep ahead of the changing times the Aviation Club was organized at Fenger for those students who take an interest in aviation. They are given the opportunity of studying different types of aircraft by visiting such places as the Howard Aircraft Company, the Municipal Airport, and the Rosenwald Museum Aircraft Exhibit. This club functions under the able guidance of Mr. Sykes.

Robert Ball—4A

DEBATING CLUB

Sign language probably started with Kiowas, a tribe of Plains Indians, who say almost all they have to say in that manner. (From American Indians, by Fredrick Starr.) The members of the Debating Club probably wouldn't make very good Indians, because they do love to talk. This group was asked to join the Interscholastic High School Debating League and has talked against six schools in the league this season. The topic of the debates was, "Resolved that the Government should control the Railroad!" The league holds meetings once a month. On April 3, Fenger was the host. Under Miss Conner's leadership this club has been making splendid progress.

Ruth Keller—4A

DRUM AND BUGLE CORPS

As the Indians celebrate their victory by the ever beating of the tom-toms, so do our Drum and Bugle Corps with the blending of the blaring bugle and the rhythmic beating of the drums. This group is under the capable leadership of Captain William Burnham, who has been teaching the girls new melodies to spring on the crowd this fall. For the service they have rendered to the school the girls have received emblems which they are more than proudly wearing.

Drilling and marching this spring has been under the guidance of Sergeant Robinson and R.O.T.C. cadets so by this autumn the girls will be a more talented group than they have in the past.

Viola Sharkey—4A

WESTERN RAMBLERS

"Ride 'em cowboy!—Show 'em how, boy!" is the song we hear as we wend our way to the "Pow-wow" in room 206. Sure enough, the sight we behold as we enter, are the groups of braves and maidens gathered 'round their chieftain, wahooing and singing to the strumming of their stringed instruments. This tribe is the Western Ramblers, who with their chief, Eleanor Szlaga, and, Medicine Man, Mr. Neil Trimble, lift their voices in a lusty chorus.

Yes, sir-ee! If its a wild and wooly Western time you're craving, just come on in, and "Ride 'em, cowboy! Yippee!"

Naomi Berg—4A

GERMAN BAND

Under the sponsorship of Sergeant Robinson, the German Band gets into full swing. The club is mostly made up of boys from the R.O.T.C. Because of their love for German music, these boys thoroughly enjoy themselves. The boys play for their own pleasure.

problem at one of their meetings. You may see them every other Wednesday afternoon enjoying a lecture, party, or working out a problem. Among other things the Rosenwald Museum and the Planetarium have proved both helpful and interesting to this group. Requirements for admittance to this club are two semesters of math and at least a "G" average. Mr. Arpee is the new sponsor.

The officers who so successfully presided the eleventh hour every Friday were Edward Hagen—First Consul; Bonita Bimrose—Second Consul; Duane Gephart—Praetor, Rose Marie Brunetti—Censor; Isabel Thorpe—Quaestor, and Dorothy Hardy—Club Musician.

JUNIOR CITIZENS—Page 125

Through the initiative of its four officers Bert Becker, president; Betty Berg, vice president; Viola Renz, secretary; Leroy Krause, treasurer; and its energetic members, the Junior Citizens have enjoyed the largest membership in recent years, yet it has retained its vim, vigor, and vitality because of this cooperation and support.

Betty Higgins—4A

DRAMA CLUB—Page 121

A major part of this semester's activities was the production of a "Clean-up Week" program. This is one of the ways in which the club is of service to the school.

The man behind the gavel this semester was Thurman Grafton. In his absence, Phillip Sidler presided. Lorraine Jaax had charge of the records, while Betty Bellus ably handled the finances. The programs and socials were the outcome of the efforts of Marjorie Van Swol and Betty Skelly.

Swan said, "I feel very self-conscious." One-Who-Faints(Alice M. Bhio) says she faints every time the tribal artist gets ready to draw her picture.

And now, it is time for the couriers to go back to Chief Kutenas and tell him all they have heard. So we take leave of them as they journey back to the home of Chief Kutenas, Seeker-of-all-Knowledge.

The club receives newspapers from Mexico and other places in which there are news items, jokes, and stories printed in Spanish. Any film concerning life in Spain or Spanish America are eagerly sought. Heading the club is Virginia Antanitis as president, Anita Pessetto as secretary, Mary Bonaparte, Lester Mogren and Adeline Zambon make up the program committee. Miss Owens is the sponsor.

succeeding in gaining an understanding of the moods and manners of horses as riding through the trails every week is one of their greatest joys. The train of horses is led by Martha Schilling and assisted by Clayton Walpole, Winifred Quedensley, Jack Kilroy and Fred Giles, who are the capable officers, while Miss De Haan and Mr. Koedyker are the sponsors.

Eleanore Gerlofson—4A

THE FENGER ADVERTISERS

Through drawing and diagrams the Indians showed their many traditions and all important events just as do the Advertisers of Fenger today.

This artistic group was organized for the purpose of bringing the numerous activities of Fenger to the attention of the students, and to the people of the community. They soon inaugurated the silk screen process of printing this advertising material. Since September, 1938 more than 20,000 items have been printed. Members spend many hours each day at this great service work, their reward being pride in accomplishment and the learning of a practical craft.

Honestly interested and ambitious students will be welcomed.

The Library Assistants serve our school in much the same way. A person having "book" trouble may rest assured that a librarian will gladly help him. Dependable, efficient, and courteous, they render a valuable service to the faculty as well as to the student body, by filing, typing, answering telephones, and helping to issue the school's bulletins. Compliments of the

Fenger Parent Teachers' Association

YOUTH in his Physical, Mental, Moral and Spiritual Development is Our Vital Concern.

THAT it should learn firsthand all school conditions and town conditions affecting the child.

THAT a parent-teacher association should be concerned with all problems that relate to the welfare of the child, in home, school, and community.

THAT its great object should be to interest all people in all children and to link in common purpose the home, the school, and all other educative forces in the life of the child, to work for his highest good.

THAT it should work actively to supply the school and community needs by creating a public sentiment which shall favor and provide good teachers, good school equipment, and adequate recreation for leisure time.

THAT it should not be a means of entertainment, or charity, or criticism of school authority, but a cooperative, nonpolitical, noncommercial effort to produce American citizens who shall be strong in body, alert in mind, and sound in character, capable of perpetuating the best which has been developed in our national life.

WE BELIEVE THAT the principles which guide the parent-teacher association are the embodiment of social service, civic virtue, and patriotism.

IF YOU BELIEVE in OUR CREED, we invite you to join our association.

New Shop in Old Place

New Owner—Pearl Thomas

New Materials from Ground Up

New Operators—Experts

I, a resident in Roseland for years, a Fenger graduate, a former Courier editor, have recently purchased this convenient beauty shop. I have attractively redecorated it, making it a bright and cheerful place in which to meet your friends and to be expertly beautified. I have installed new methods and materials all at the old rates.

Come, Try us, I'm sure you will be happy here.

The Indians had very weird beliefs. They had medicine men who were supposed to make Indians well by making signs and noises to their gods.

Although they had foolish beliefs, they did beautiful weaving. Some of their weavings were one to two inches thick.

There was one tribe of Indians called the "Flat Heads." From the time the Indian was a baby until after he stopped growing, two pieces of wood were placed on either side of the head, and tied very tightly. When the wood was taken off, the head was square and flat, and so, thus, they were called "Flat Heads."

Even though there were many fierce and war-like tribes, there were several friendly ones, among which were some branches of the Sioux Tribes.

Norman Johnston, Burnside—1A

HOW I EARNED MY FIRST QUARTER

It was a breezy March day, when I was about 6 years old, that I earned my first quarter. As I walked down the street, I had to clutch frantically at my belongings to keep them from blowing away. Just as I turned a corner, a man's hat blew by. I turned and started to chase it, although it had a head start. Up one street and down the other, I raced, thinking as I went, what my reward would be from the owner. At last I caught up with it. It was an expensive looking black derby. As I could see no trace of the owner, I decided to take it home and consult my parents. When I entered the living room I heard my father talking to mother. "But the worst part of it all," he lamented, "it was a brand new hat."

This is where I entered the picture. "Father," I ventured, "did you by any chance lose a black derby?"

"Why, yes," he said, "how did you know?"

"Well, Dad," I said proudly, "I found it."

My, but he was pleased! "Daughter," he said, "I think you deserve a reward."

Now, it was my turn to be pleased!

Elaine Selven, Curtis—1A

In practically nothing flat we were running across the soft, white sand toward the gurgling, refreshing water whose waves looked as if the water was throwing its arms out beckoning us to come in and frolic about in its cool waters. We need no coaxing. We splashed headlong into the surf.

Jumping, diving, and sports more suited for fish than humans took up the larger part of the morning. At about one o'clock we finally were persuaded to come out for lunch. On that score, needless to say, we all agreed.

We went back to the beach and the water about an hour later. We lay beneath the trees and covered our feet and legs with warm sand. Frolicking in the water until four-thirty o'clock finished the day. Reluctantly plodding across the sands, weary but exceedingly happy, we arrived at the auto and in half an hour we were again on our way homeward bound.

The evening was spent retelling our adventures on the porch steps of our house. That night as my brother and I were about to retire we expressed an extreme wish for another day such as that, and our dreams were of pounding surf and Palm trees swaying in the breeze.
